Times News Services

TOKYO — Queen Elizabeth, the first reigning British monarch to visit Japan, received an enthusiastic welcome today from Emperor Hirohito and an estimated 40,000 cheering citizens who waved paper Japanese and British flags.

The 74-year-old emperor and Empress Nagako greeted the Queen and Prince Philip in the entrance hall of the guest house where they will stay during their six-day visit. The couple came from the Crown colony of Hong Kong on the Queen's special plane.

Labor Leaders Balk

Times News Service

TORONTO — Canadian Labor Congress leaders said today they will only agree to a federal government call for voluntary wage restraint if the government introduces a program to provide more equitable distribution of income and restraints on rents, dividends, profits, professional fees, land speculation and housing.

Leaders of the 1.9 million-member labor organization made a statement on wage restraint proposals, advanced by Finance Minister John Turner, after a morning meeting of the heads of 60 unions.

"The labor movement is willing to do its part in the fight against inflation, but it will never consent to discriminatory treatment against wage earners, pensioners and those who have no means to protect themselves," the congress position paper said.

Congress president Joe Morris said no program of wage restraint can be considered acceptable to labor unless it covers the following:

—Curbs on oil and gas prices "which have contributed to the fueling of inflation."

—A major effort to improve the supply of housing — "This has seriously deteriorated and eroded real incomes through higher housing costs."

—Regulation of rents to curb gouging of tenants.

—Action to stop land speculation.

—Higher old-age pensions.

—Guarantees that tax concessions to corporations will be invested to create jobs "and not end up in the payment of higher dividends."

—Full employment policies to get rid of current high levels of unemployment.

—Action to control fees in the professions.

—Tax credits to protect those with little or no bargaining power and who make up the bottom end of the incomes scale.

Prime target of labor's displeasure has been a confidential government document leaked to the press this week which proposes maximum wage increases of 12 per cent or $2,400 — whichever is lower — in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of the program.

The confidential document, which congress leaders did not get until Monday afternoon — after it was published in the press—sets out a plan to reduce the rate of inflation to 3.5 per cent a year by the last quarter of 1978.

The rate of inflation in the third quarter of 1975 is expected to be 10 per cent.

The document includes a table in which workers who gained less than the national average in wage increases in the last two years will get the maximum 12 per cent.

Those who won more than the national average gain would have their maximum per-cent raises reduced proportionately.

Professional fees would be goverened by the same principles applying to wages.

In general, price increases would be limited to the amount sufficient to cover cost increases and guides would only apply to interest rates set by banks and other financial institutions. There are no restraints proposed in the document for dividends..

Meanwhile, NDP parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent said Tuesday government anti-inflation programs are wage controls without price controls.

"It's clearly a set of documents aimed at working people only," Broadbent said of government working papers distributed to labor leaders.

ROYAL REVAMPS MORTGAGE RATES

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada restructured its system of mortgage rates Tuesday in an effort to channel more funds into new housing construction and less into existing housing.

The rate for mortgages on existing housing will rise to 11 per cent for both National Housing Act (NHA) mortgages and conventional mortgages. The maximum mortgage granted on existing housing will be cut to $25,000 from $60,000.

The rates on new housing will not change. NHA mortgages will remain at 10.5 per cent and conventional mortgages at 10.75 per cent.

"The move has been made necessary by the unprecedented demand for mortgage funds which, if unchecked, would have exhausted our year's allocation in short order," said Rowland Frazee, Royal's executive vice-president and general manager.

"The $25,000 ceiling on mortgages on existing housing is intended to ensure that funds which continue to flow into this sector will be spread over the largest number of housing units and, in fact, will flow to the lower-priced sector of the markets," he said.

A number of trust companies, including Canada Permanent Trust Co. of Toronto, have reported they are out of funds and are not accepting new mortgage applications.

City Body Shop Rate $20

Victoria area body shops will break rank and raise their hourly rate to $20 from the government-set rate of $15.50 effective May 15.

An ICBC spokesman in Vancouver said today Victoria is the only area in the province where body shop operators have planned unilateral action to raise rates.

Dennis Butner, president of the Victoria unit of the Automotive Retailers Association, said today the raise is planned to meet higher operating costs. He said the current Insurance Corporation of B.C. Autoplan payment is not realistic in terms of the body shop operators' main concern—higher operating costs, taxes and wages.

Wage settlement yet to be made are expected to be between $8 and $9 an hour, plus 2 per cent holiday pay, he said. Meanwhile, shop charge-out rates cannot be made retroactive.

ICBC is now doing studies on the body shop rates in effect and will probably start talks with representatives of the ARA within the next month, the ICBC spokesman said.

Victoria body shop operators have raised the rates here several times before out of concert with the rest of B.C.

The last time the rates were raised above the ICBC approved rate, the insurance corporation re-instituted the old bid system for body work. A motorist was required to get three bids on the work to be done and ICBC would pay the lowest estimate, even if it was above the going rate.

But Victoria operators thwarted the system by refusing to give bids and motorists were forced to pay the surcharge out of their own pockets.

Crime Unit For City

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald confirmed today a special crime-fighting unit will be setup in Victoria "at least within a month and probably much sooner."

He said the special body, operated by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit, was requested by local law enforcement agencies and community groups and will handle major crime investigations on Vancouver Island.

The confirmation follows a decision by the policy board of CLEU to set up an auxiliary branch here.

CLEU was organized as a joint provincial police force last year to counter organized crime and has operated out of Vancouver, involved mainly in drug cases.

Macdonald said the Victoria CLEU office would likely be located at 2596 Cadboro Bay Road and will involve a core staff which will draw on law enforcement agencies throughout the island.

He did not rule out the possibility other CLEU units will be established in other parts of the province.

Liberal Showdown ... One Will Resign

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The Liberal party is headed for a showdown over the unity movement at this month's policy convention and, whatever the outcome, at least one MLA will resign from the party.

Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) announced Tuesday he will resign from the party if delegates at the May 24-26 Liberal convention do not support the concept of moving towards "a coalescing of the free enterprise parties."

If he resigns, Williams said he will sit as an independent and decide later whether to leave politics or join the Social Credit party.

But Liberal leader David Anderson said if the party moves to support a unity or coalition movement he will resign as leader and also sit as an independent.

In Vancouver, the Vancouver-Burrard Liberal Constituency Association Tuesday night came out in full support of Anderson.

The association approved a resolution stating its opposition to a unity party in any form and urging that Liberal candidates run in every constituency in B.C. in the next provincial election.

Anderson said he has been identified with a party stand against involvement with unity and if the party changes

Canal Opened

ISMAILIA, Egypt (UPI) — Two West German freighters sailed up the Suez Canal today after being trapped nearly eight years under the glaring desert sun in the blockaded waterway. The 8,965-ton Munsterland and its sister ship, the 8,656-ton Nordwind, became the first of 14 stranded cargo vessels to negotiate the now-cleared canal.

Search Resumed

A search resumed today for two Vancouver men missing off the Queen Charlotte Islands after their 32-foot aluminum boat capsized in heavy seas Monday night. Missing are engineer Roy Gerhardt, 38, and Don Mercer, 36, employees of Q. C. Timber of Vancouver. The body of Eric Turk, 46, of Parksville was found Tuesday.

AMC Reports Loss

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors Corp. today reported a loss of $47.8 million in the first three months of 1975, the biggest loss in the company's 21-year history. It was the third quarterly loss in a row for the smallest of the "big four" auto companies and completed a series of January-March financial statements that were the worst for the industry since the 1930's great depression.

Strikers Fined

CALGARY — Four Calgary air traffic control assistants charged under the Public Service Staff Relations Act after participating in an illegal walkout last October have been given the maximum $100 fine or 30 days. Judge Brian Stevenson, in sentencing the four who had pleaded guilty, said Canadians are "a little fed up with illegal strikes."

Reprieve for Murderer Buys Allmand Study Time

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — After obtaining a stay of execution for convicted murderer Rene Vaillancourt yesterday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said the reprieve would give cabinet time to study the whole question of capital punishment.

Vaillancourt was scheduled to hang May 15 for the shooting death of a Toronto police constable in a 1973 holdup and the question of commuting his sentence was "too complex" to be decided by Cabinet now, Allmand told newsmen. Two members of his jury recommended clemency.

Taken into consideration was the fact that there are now eight men awaiting death for killing policemen or jail guards on duty.

The solicitor-general also said that a stay of execution has been granted in the case of John Francis Connearney, sentenced to hang in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail April 25.

There was a "very important possibility" that legislation would be introduced before Vaillancourt's new execution date — October 31 — to end all capital punishment in Canada, the solicitor-general added.

He was personally committed to a total ban on hanging and between now and Oct. 31 "I intend to pursue my goal of abolishing the death penalty."

All death sentences have been commuted since 1962 when Canada's last hangings occurred in Toronto.

Allmand felt that the tide of public opinion was changing from a hard line favoring capital punishnent to a stance "more in favor of abolition," according to letters received by his office.

25 FLEE FIRE IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 80 firemen and 15 pieces of equipment brought under control a three-alarm fire that destroyed three buildings in Vancouver's Skid Road district early today.

Fire officials said it was believed the 25 residents, mostly elderly men, all were safely evacuated from the building at Main and Powell.

At one point, firemen thought they would have to evacuate a city block if a fourth building, a three-storey rooming house, caught fire, but the fire was controlled before this was necessary.

Recycling Depot Braced

The recycling depot on Borden at McKenzie will be back in business Saturday at 9 a.m. — and braced for the bottles and cans piling up in homes through three months of labor strife.

But, spokesman David Jackman said Tuesday, there are 100 tons of old newspapers in the depot now and no room for more until they have been moved out.

Jackman said he received about 15 to 20 calls early Tuesday, the first day the regional staff was back on the job since being locked out early in February.

"We really expect quite a lot of people on Saturday."

The recycling depot expects to resume its regular hours next week, that is, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

For now, what it can handle is glass bottles, cleaned and flattened tin cans, clean aluminum foil, corrugated boxes and brown kraft bags.

Later, it will be able to take the bundles of newspapers.

Jackman said the staff is digging its way through the heaps of material left in the parking lot outside the depot.

Later this week the staff will meet to decide in what order the mobile clinics it has operated elsewhere in the community will be brought back into action.

Police Willing to End Lock-Up Duties

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory today welcomed the idea that responsibility for lock-up facilities be taken from police and given to another body.

The proposal that the attorney-general's department assume responsibility for lock-up and remand facilities in the B.C. criminal courts system to end an "atrocious and inhumane" system was contained in a government report released Tuesday.

The report, prepared for the Justice Development Commission by Jack Cram, vice-chairman of the attorney-general department's courts division, recommends that lock-ups be supervised by sheriff's officers instead of police.

"It would relieve us of a tremendous workload," said Gregory.

"The whole thing could perhaps be handled at less expense by the sheriff's office."

Cram's report also recommends that remand centres should be operated by sheriffs rather than the corrections department.

The report says atrocious conditions are likely to remain if municipalities, through the police, retain responsibility.

"There is a fundamental injustice in the police retaining custody of a prisoner once he has been charged; the accused should not be in custody of his accuser."

Cram recommends that the accused be turned over to a neutral custodian as soon as possible following his arrest and that interviews and line-ups be conducted in a neutral location.

The current system pays lip service to the presumption of innocence and yet permits accused persons to be held by correctional officers before they are convicted and in need of correction.

"In addition to inhumane and inconsistent treatment of prisoners awaiting trial, there are many inefficiencies in the operation of lock-ups and remand centres."

Cram suggests establishment of small lock-up centres around the province to lessen need for transportation.

He recommends that all courts be integrated and criminal courts and counsel provide flexibility to accommodate trials of accused persons in custody.

County supreme court sittings should be continued during July and August and time limits for disposition of criminal cases should be investigated.

"The problem most frequently voiced by judges, lawyers police, corrections personnel and the public at large,

GRANT TO FLUTIST

A Victoria Symphony principal player has been awarded an $814 Canada Council grant for summer study.

He is flutist Jan Menting and the grant will take him to Nice, France, for three weeks study with famous French flutist Jean Pierre Rampal.

The grant has been made on the basis of his musical history to date and on a tape of a recital Menting gave at Craigdarroch Castle earlier this season.

Menting is a Master Warrant Officer on the staff of the Canadian Forces School of Music at Esquimalt, which he joined in 1966.

He has been 10 years principal flute with the symphony and a teacher of the faculty of Victoria Conservatory of Music during the decade of its existence.

A native of the Netherlands and son of a musician, Menting's whole life has been spent with music. His wife, Elsa, is a pianist and a member of the Conservatory faculty and his daughter, Joyce, is also a musician who plays in the cello section of the Victoria Symphony.

Liberals Head for Showdown its position he could not remain as leader.

Coalition of the free enterprise opposition parties in any form, before the next election, is "absolutely unacceptable," he said.

Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey), the other outspoken MLA in support of the unity concept, said Tuesday he would not comment on Williams' announcement.

But he said he supports Williams' stand and will make a statement shortly on the position he plans to take on party support for unity.

Both men have said they have no specific plans at the moment to join the Socred party but some method must be found to end the split free enterprise vote which elected the NDP in the last election.

Last year they and other opposition MLAs talked of forming a unity party but the idea fell by the wayside and Socred leader Bill Bennett refused to participate in any unity party other than Social Credit.

Williams said Tuesday he is not speaking about another opposition party but some form of coalition which would probably keep the three free enterprise parties intact but end a split in the free enterprise vote.

One example he cited would see each consitutency hold joint nominating conventions with all three parties so only one free enterprise candidate would run in each race.

The nominee would run under the party banner of the people who nominated him, said Williams, so the parties would not be eliminated. One of the opposition parties might still get a majority of seats and form a government, he said, or a coalition might be formed if no party got a clear-cut majority.

But Williams said his suggestion is only one of many alternatives that might be established under a coalescing scheme.

Williams said the party has never officially voted on the unity issue and he believes it will be beneficial to have it discussed at the convention.

Anderson said the last convention in October showed overwhelming support for his speech against unity but said he is not opposed to a full airing of the subject again.

He said it is reasonable that Williams resign if the party does not support his position and while it will be difficult for the party if he does leave, the result will ultimately be a stronger party.

"The Liberal party has been here for 70 years and it will be around for 70 more years," he said.

McGeer said if a coalition of the free enterprise parties is reached he would want some guarantee that a free enterprise alternative could emerge again in B.C.

As leader of the party before 1972, said McGeer, he learned that a free enterprise alternative can never be elected under the existing voting system.

Lock-Up Change Call Welcomed

however, is the problem of juveniles.

"The courts' hands are simply tied due to the lack of appropriate services and facilities for juveniles, both while they await their hearing . . . and following a finding of delinquency," says Cram.

He recommends responsibility and administration of juvenile delinquents be co-ordinated under a central authority.

"While the respective government departments are at a stalemate, police and communities become more and more frustrated. Concern for community backlash is frequently expressed."

The human resources department and the corrections department are concerned and anxious to provide solutions, said Cram.

Better use should be made of the lie detector (polygraph) in the court system the report says.

Prepared on the basis of statistics from April to November last year, the report pinpoints other major problems in the courts, which have been denied adequate financial support and have failed to keep pace with changing and growing society.

The system has also failed to make use of modern methods and technology to adapt to changes and the result has been the loss of pubic confidence and respect for the court process, says Cram.

Major problems are:

—Unreasonable delaya snd unnecessary costs in criminal and civil proceedings;

—Procedural complexity, particularly in civil courts;

—Outmoded methods and procedures for court administration;

—Lack of adequate and appropriate court facilities;

—Insufficient numbers of properly-trained court personnel;

—Lack of statistical information and information systems.

Gregory was critical of Cram's "Scattergun attack on all phases of justice."

"We all know why he's doing it," he said, but refused to elaborate.

The chief denied there was inconsistent and inhumane treatment of prisoners awaiting trial.

"The whole bag of accusations would, in effect, say that the bail reform bill is ineffective," he said.

In fact, said Gregory, bail reform has greatly reduced the number of complaints about people awaiting trial.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald tabled the report in the legislature and said it would provide the public with background information on the problems in B.C.'s justice system.

Some progress has already been made on solving difficulties mentioned by Cram in the six-month-old report.

A justice commission spokesman said today definite progress has been made and there has been significant gains in delays in criminal trials in smaller courts and in civil trials throughout the province.

The commission has responded in three ways to the report, he said, by going into the courts and deciding what immediate changes can be made to improve the system; by a thorough review of administrative procedures; and by a review of court rules and some sections of the criminal code itself.

The report itself is being continually updated by the commission, he said.

Gas Station Zoning Ahead To Stop Self-Serve Spread

Ignoring a plea from Mayor Peter Pollen to prohibit all further self-serve gasoline stations in Victoria, city council instead agreed Tuesday to regulate "proliferation" of the outlets through zoning.

Separate zoning categories will be established for regular service stations and self-serves. The latter zone will limit the numbers to two self-serve stations per company or whichever is the lesser.

Of Victoria's 53 gasoline service stations five are self-serves and applications for three more have been submitted to City Hall.

Council's action followed an appearance by a 16-man delegation of local service station operators, seeking curbs on the increasing trend toward conversion of outlets to self-serve operation.

Among the arguments in a lengthy brief submitted by Brian Tapp, director of the Automotive Retailers Association, it was claimed that the present lack of controls allows increasing domination of gasoline retailing by the major oil companies and eliminates many jobs.

The brief also argued that the trend steadily deprives motorists of the routine checks which can avert major breakdowns, causes traffic problems at self-serves where gallonage volume is suddenly increased and poses a threat to personal safety through spills and smoking.

It noted that earlier this year Richmond council rejected oil company applications to open self-serve outlets in that municipality, and that such operations are also banned in the city of Toronto.

Pollen, who has been trying to persuade council to impose restrictions for about two years, again voiced his concerns on the safety aspects of self-serve stations.

"We are quietly, imperceptibly, taking all the safety checks away," he said, by permitting the proliferation of stations where only one console attendant is on duty and motorists do not have their oil, tire and other checks on a routine basis.

"When you consider that between $700 and $1,200 goes into safety equipment in today's large automobile . . . it seems incredible that at one end we are putting all this immense technology in, and at the bottom end we are taking all these servicing possibilities away."

Pollen accused the oil companies of being "extremely derelict" in their responsibilities, by putting across on the public "a very, very subtle sell."

Ald. Mike Young, who suggested the two-per-company controls under zoning policy, said Victoria probably has a greater need than most cities to limit the numbers of self-serve stations, because it has such a high proportion of elderly residents unable to serve themselves at stations.

Cruise Ship Berths Pledged

Federal Transport Minister Jean Marchand has agreed to a Victoria request to make ministry of transport berthing space available for cruise ships.

Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said today the agreement means Victoria can guarantee berthing space.

In the past, some cruiseships have been reluctant to stop at Victoria because berth space was not guaranteed.

Under the agreement, the cruise ships will continue to berth at Ogden Point. However, if freighters are using the space, the ministry of transport will make berthing space available at its property purchased from the Victoria Machinery Depot.

"The guarantee of berthing space is very important. Now we can launch an energetic campaign to bring more cruise ships to Victoria," Small said.

The chamber wrote its first letter to the federal transport minister in January, 1972, asking for use of ministry of transport berthing space.

This led to a meeting with regional MoT officials six weeks ago and the federal minister announced his verdict in a letter to the chamber.

The campaign to bring more cruise ships to Victoria will be handled by the Greater Victoria Visitor Information Centre, which prepares entertainment at dockside for the tourists.

VIC manager Don Nixon said there will be 27 arrivals of cruise ships this year between June 2 and Sept. 13, bringing 16,000 visitors for a day of shopping and sight-seeing.

As a result of the new agreement, additional cruise ships are expected to be lined up for next year. This year's visiting schedule has already been completed.

The potential increase is in the range of five or six more arrivals to bring the totals to about 33 arrivals bringing more than 20,000 visitors to Victoria.

Half U.S. To Support Other Half?

CANBERRA (Reuter)—Half the population of the United States may be working to support the other half by the year 2,000 if federal government welfare spending continues at its present rate, U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Wednesday.

Speaking to the Australian-American association, he said that by the turn of the century, 51 per cent of the U.S. national product would be consumed in supporting the social welfare program.

Rational Law and Order

Last week it looked as though the Trudeau administration had finally screwed its courage to the sticking place on the issue of capital punishment. Liberal caucus leaks predicted a government bill to abolish the death penalty permanently would be tabled in the House shortly. On Monday Deputy Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp — known for his conservative views — said the government would not necessarily introduce such a bill in the near future.

The only rational explanation for such indecision is that caucus and cabinet are still divided on the issue. A recent Gallup poll showing 69 per cent of Canadians surveyed favored a return to the death penalty, not to mention the strident retention campaign of Conservative MP John Reynolds, has probably made many Liberals cautious. But the government is being forced to act by circumstances. At federal behest, a stay of execution has been granted one man scheduled to hang eight days hence. If the cabinet commutes his sentence to life imprisonment, as it has done to so many other murderers since 1962, it will make a mockery of current law. If any man hangs, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says he will resign.

Arguments for and against capital punishment have been heatedly debated throughout the country since the first partial ban was instituted in 1968. No proof exists that the death penalty is a deterrent. Nor is there any evidence that the government is "soft on criminals." The step may be taken, finally, because the government believes it wrong for the state to execute human beings.

In this matter we agree entirely with the abolitionists. Some times governments must do the unpopular thing, act in spite of public opinion, to do what they think right on a matter of principle. This used to be called leadership, but it's a quality rarely seen in most levels of government today. The consensus or the soft sell — which the Liberals tried in instigating two partial bans on hanging — is the more usual route taken towards progress among an increasingly fragmented, regionalized electorate.

During the years of the partial death penalty ban, Canadian justice has been discriminatory. An equally brutal murder of a private citizen or a policeman results in two types of punishment. The policeman's murderer could be sentenced to hang; the private citizen's killer could get life imprisonment.

Not only did this categorize murderers on the basis of who they killed, it puts policemen and prison guards in a unique position. Their murders alone require the death penalty — a patently silly situation that creates a special class of citizen, after death, as it were.

In abolishing the ultimate penalty absolutely, the government will undoubtedly make life imprisonment mean that, rather than the charade it has become today where a murderer given 20 years is often paroled in less than 10 years.

Society does need protection from those who kill others, Premeditated murder convictions should in most cases result in life imprisonment. If an abolition bill becomes law Canadians, will have rational law and rational order, not vengeance or violence committed by the state in the name of every citizen. The Trudeau administration has to stop dithering before the trap springs extinguishing a life and a humanitarian principle in one fell swoop. The death penalty should be abolished now.

"... on behalf of myself and the medical profession as a whole, Mrs. Haroldson, I'd like to thank you for your assistance in getting Medicare off to a flying start ..."

It's in Ottawa, Ponce

You've probably heard from your elected representative at Ottawa one time or another how hard he works, the long hours he puts in at his desk answering constituents' mail or sitting in the House of Commons listening to tedious speeches. It's a 168-hour-a-week occupation.

Whatever such work habits would do for a coal miner or a carpenter, apparently MPs thrive on them. A life insurance company which studied life spans of our members of parliament since 1867 found that they live longer than the rest of us, 12 per cent longer over the last century. Those MPs elected since 1930 live on average almost one-third longer than us plebians.

Even senators do better. They live two per cent longer lives than ordinary Canadians. Appointment to the red chamber may be likened to a living death, but the embalming qualities of debate in the upper house have obviously been overlooked.

As for MPs, well, far be it from us to suggest that $32,000 a year and a plush pension that starts paying, regardless of age, after just six years' service are powerful incentives for a member of the House of Commons to look both ways before stepping out into traffic and to watch his intake of too many rich (subsidized) meals in the parliamentary restaurant.

Go north, Ponce de Leon, go north.

Cyclists Reviled

I suspect that there is an unconscious resentment toward cyclists expressed by North American motorists in an aggressive kind of ignorance — "honest, judge, I just didn't see him," ranging to malicious crowding off the road, flicking cigarette butts, and invective. A resentment born of jealousy at freedom, at the intelligent choice of one of the most efficient transportation systems available. The energy economy of calories expended compared to work accomplished is far more advantageous on a bicycle than on foot. Or on wings. Amortize the cost of manufacture of an automobile over its use history, plus operating costs, and you sure don't get 10 miles to a bowl of granola.

I respectfully submit that if this case be true, the elected and appointed officials responsible for highway safety have a neglected duty to their constituency. At present, motorists are not educated to, nor tested on, an ability to perceive cyclists in the same light as that gravel truck in your blind spot. If seen, the cyclists' speed and direction are often unregistered or ignored by the observer. Simply as a poorly educated reflex, if nothing else. This is not just a case for a few more words in the drivers' safety handbooks. Do you really think it would be enough? — Toomas Saask, 1024 Redfern Street.

Canadian Interest

I'm a sergeant in the U.S. Air Force, stationed in northern California, and I'd like very much to correspond with someone from Canada. I hope to visit Canada someday, and I find I can learn much more about a country through personal correspondence than from a book.

I'm 23, married and the father of a 10-month-old boy. I like to collect stamps, dabble in photography, and travel, which is one reason I joined the Air Force. I also read extensively.

I'm an Air Force medic, and I work in the 2nd Aeromedical Staging Flight, a unit of the base air evacuation squadron. My enlistment is up next year, but I plan to re-enlist.

I'm very much interested in hearing from someone, and I'll try to answer as many letters as possible. My wife, Susan, who is 22, would also like to correspond with someone from Canada. She has travelled extensively there, especially the western provinces. — James T. Thompson, 118 Peach Tree Avenue, Vacaville, Calif., 95688.

Bourassa as Mackenzie King?

By RICHARD GWYN

QUEBEC — To visit Quebec is to wonder whatever happened to it all.

The nerve, the passion, the arrogant bravado that inspired that nationalist songs of Pauline Julien, that made for sale signs blossom on the lawns of Westmount after every speech by separatist leader Rene Levesque, that sent battalions of Quebec technocrats in well-cut suits to out-argue Ottawa with Jesuit skill — all these are gone.

Instead one finds self-doubt — the corrosive malaise of a society that no longer knows what it really wants or even what it is. Federal Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier has anguished over a "crisis of leadership" at every level, from classroom to church. Robert Cliche, head of the inquiry into the chaos of the construction industry, speaks of "an illness" in the society. La Presse, Quebec's largest newspaper, warns in an unprecedented front-page editorial, "the vacuum is getting deeper and deeper."

Premier Robert Bourassa has presided over this change. Five years ago he came to power, and last week he celebrated his anniversary. Bourassa looks at what has happened in the last five years and he sees it as good.

"Theory is for the intellectuals in their drawing rooms," Bourassa said during an interview. "Look at the results. The year I came to power, Ottawa had to send troops into the streets of Montreal. This year Ottawa is sending us $1 billion in oil subsidies. That's what Quebec wants."

Cool and Calculated

The answer measures the man. No heat, no hurried attempt to defend difficult terrain — he says Pelletier's analysis is "to pessimistic," and as for the scandals, "not one has been proven against a minister or member." Instead, a balance-sheet, cool, recreational and calculated so the account comes out in his favor.

To any interview with a public figure, one arrives freighted with set impressions. In Bourassa's case, these are the memories of his panic during the terrible 1970 FLQ crisis, of B.C. Premier David Barrett's description of him as "a white mouse," and of the nickname "Boo Boo" that Ottawa insiders call him behind closed doors.

At first, these images apply. Bourassa has a certain charm but no magnetism or air of authority. Boyish, in his case, means that he is easy for cartoonists to caricature as Ottawa's puppet.

"An underfed bank clerk," someone has called him. No clerk could afford Bourassa's superbly tailored dark-blue suit, but he spoils its effect with a beige wool sweater.

The interiew takes place in a small, private room above a restaurant so that Bourassa can eat and talk at the same time (Bourassa works 12 and 14 hours a day). On the stairs outside stand two body-guards, hard, thickset men who smile with difficulty. Presumably they are there partly to inspire awe. Instead they make Bourassa seem more vulnerable.

As Bourassa talks, on and on until nearly midnight, the preconceptions recede. One remembers instead that he won power at 36, the youngest premier in Quebec's history, that his majority is larger even than Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's, that by the next election he will have held power longer than any premier since Maurice Duplessis. Slowly one begins to comprehend how he has done it.

Who Needs Charisma?

Across the table, never entirely relaxed, coming back again and again to his main points, skillfully dropping the odd bit of inside information that always delight a reporter, sits William Lyon Mackenzie King, re-born.

Jack Pickersgill, for years the grey eminence to Canada's least-loved, least-understood, and most successful politician, has said that Bourassa is more like King than any politician he has known.

Pickersgill has hit the mark. Bourassa likes the comparison, and adds to it. "Yes, I have studied him, carefully," he says. "King was often accused of not being firm, but he knew how to be firm when he had to be. So do I. Remember I jailed the union leaders. But I did it without demagoguery."

As in King's case, Bourassa's opponents, particularly the separatists with their quick, self-righteous passion, make the fatal mistake of under-estimating him. "Charisma," he says disdainfully, with the quick smile he uses when he knows he is going to score a point.

"Clement Atlee had no charisma, and look what has happened to him."

Once connection is made, resemblances between the two are easy to find. King, his crystal ball hidden, made himself as colorless as he could manage. So does Bourassa. About the only anecdotes to be told about him concern his personal hairdresser, the steaks he consumes to try, without success, to gain weight, his 20 daily lengths in the pool, "for intellectual and physical discipline."

Only one magazine has attemped a full-length profile of him. That was Chatelaine, a woman's magazine, and it really was more interested in Andree Bourassa.

The vital link is that, like King during the conscription crisis of the second World War, Bourassa governs a society that is deeply polarized. Out of choice but also out of necessity, he disguises his purposes and goals, at times perhaps even from himself.

As one example, Bourassa praises U.S. capital and loves to tell of a weekend spent with the Rockefellers. Yet he also calls himself "a social democrat" and quotes British economist John Maynard Keynes' dictum that inflation well-handled can be used to redistribute income. Indeed, he has instituted denticare for children, legal aid, and in the recent budget cut 300,000 from the taxrolls.

Race relations require Bourassa to apply his fluid formula beyond the boundaries of his own province.

"I am always suprised that English Canada should jump at some of the words I use. (His comment "a French state in a Canadian common market" comes to mind.) Why do they not understand? I am working at the same time for Quebec and for Canada. This is not always easy."

Bill 22, the controversial language legislation, is a case in point. Protests by English-Canadians, it becomes clear though Bourassa will not say so, have served their purpose stengthening his reputation among Quebec nationalists.

His judgement of separatism is rational, and cold.

"It would be a tragic, stupid mistake. I will fight separatism to the end of my career. We would lose 200,000 people, more. Today we have to go on our knees to Wall Street because we need the money. Separate, we would be flat on our face to Wall Street."

Rather than to Canadianism, the natural opposition to separatism, Bourassa's commitment is to federalism a kind of half-way house.

Ottawa Ambitions

He remembers his time in Ottawa as a civil servant as "very enjoyable," and surprisingly, he says that one Ottawa position that might one day interest him would be minister of finance.

"I have always been deeply interested in public administration," Bourassa says.

"I believe deeply in the federal system, in the 11 leaders making this country work. Quebec today has sufficient economic strength. James Bay will give us jobs in the '70s, and energy in the '80s. It is our culture that is in danger. Today with Pierre at Ottawa we are in no danger. But tomorrow, with our population declining and perhaps with another government and only a half-dozen Quebec ministers, how then could we allow our cultural survival to depend on the good-will of the majority? This is the guarantee I must get for my people."

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec (right) with French president Valery Giscard d'Etaing.

A constitutional confrontation, at a conference probably to be held in mid 1976, seems to be in the making. Trudeau has said he intends to bring Canada's constitution back from Britain but that he will not agree to any transfer of power to the provinces. Bourassa in turn has declared he will not agree to repatriation except as part of a package deal that gives Quebec expanded jurisdiction over immigration and culture.

Without being specific Bourassa hints that a solution can be found. Instead of a transfer of actual jurisdiction he might accept explicit constitutional guarantees for Quebec's culture and future population composition.

Bourassa's style of negotiation has been shaped by his experiences, "the toughest of my life," at the 1971 constitutional conference in Victoria. He agreed to a new constitution, then at the last minute changed his mind and refused to sign. "I felt almost physically the pressures of being a federalist Quebecker," he recalls.

Bourassa appreciates that these days Trudeau has to be more concerned about the west than about Quebec. He knows that he also has to condition public opinion before he commits himself. So he moves forward, an inch at a time.

"Relations, practical working relations, between Ottawa and Quebec have never been better."

None of these administrative deals are glamorous. When he feels the need to strike a pose, he asks for patience.

"English-Canadians must understand that I cannot do things differently. My margin for manoeuvre is very small. I am working to consolidate a besieged society."

Bourassa's vision for the future of that society will leave his critics as dissatisfied as before. He foresees, "an equilibrium, economic strength and an assurance of cultural survival."

That vision is practical. It is neither moral nor philosophic. But to demand more, bold oratory, brave promises from a Bourassa as much as from a Mackenzie King, is to ask, not so much for the impossible as for the non-existent.

"Nietzche, or was it Goethe, said that every epoch must have its own servant. The '60s were the time of bombs and slogans and for Latin, emotional leaders. Is it wrong that in the '70s Quebec should be led by someone who believes in rational, cool, politics?"

A good self-description of a politician who has taken the measure of his own inability to generate warmth and excitement, and who has learned to turn that lack to his advantage.

Quebec will have to solve its own malaise. Bourassa will provide the 75,000 jobs a year, the five budgets without tax increases in a row, the federal money.

He will be doing that, one comes away convinced, for a long time. The boyish facade hides a politician far more shrewd, far more calculating and resilient, and above all far more durable, than most observers and all of his opponents yet have recognized. Quebec, one remembers at the end, gave Mackenzie King each one of his victories.

LONDON — The Cunard liner Lusitania, which sailed on May 1 from New York for Liverpool, 1,253 passengers aboard, was torpedoed and sunk about 2 p.m. today about 10 miles off Old Head of Kinsale in southern Ireland. No definite word as to the fate of the passengers has been received by Cunard offices. Relief was sent out immediately from Queenstown. It is believed that the Lusitania's watertight bulkheads would have kept her afloat for a reasonable length of time.

Happy Egyptian Children in Ismailia

Times city editor Lon Wood has just returned from a three-week tour of Egypt and Cyprus. In these two world trouble spots, as part of an eight-member B.C. press tour led by Maj. Denny Ryan of CFB Esquimalt, Wood observed the Canadian contingents of the United Nations peacekeeping forces. (Later this year some 480 members of Victoria-based 3rd Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry will be posted to Cyprus.) Here, in the first of two parts, are Wood's notes and reflections on the trip.

Mid-East Journal— PART ONE: EGYPT

"You'll get shot!"

The line was repeated often and in all seriousness by friend, kin and workmate when the trip was announced. My own dad prayed openly for it to be cancelled.

The lighthearted minority was easier to take. A photo taken of me astride a camel by the pyramids was a must, said most. Others ventured that it might be an ideal time of year to water-ski the Nile.

The middle-of-the-road sendoff went something like, "Take lots of diarrhea pills . . ."

No one was any real help.

Some 45,000 feet over Manitoba in a Canadian Forces 707 we learned that Capt. Ian Patten of the UN's Canadian contingent in Cyprus has just been killed by a Greek or Turkish Cypriot bullet.

Patten, a 29-year-old father of two, died on the balcony of his room in Nicosia's Ledra Palace Hotel as he stood taping a message to his wife in Etobicoke.

Gunfire along the confrontation line in the divided city snowballed that night when Greek national guard conscripts fired shots into the air to mark the 20th anniversary of the EOKA guerrilla uprising against the British colonial administration.

Canada's "white knuckle" airline is better than it's cracked up to be — not unlike any first-class commercial line except most of the passengers are in uniform, too. Same food and canned orchestrations of Beatles hits but no booze.

One-hour stopover at Lahr before five-hour leg to Cairo. Canadian base at Lahr looks like Trenton — or Ottawa, or Winnipeg, or Edmonton . . .

Flocks of soldiers bound for Egypt and Cyprus board our 707. They look exceptionally young.

Later, in Egypt — where they are miles away from the confrontation line — we saw these privates armed with spades, digging Camp Ismailia out of the desert sand.

Their counterparts in Cyprus are right up front, manning the UN observation posts between Greek and Turk positions as close as 100 feet.

Dusk approaches soon after we cross the Mediterranean and catch sight of the African continent. The Nile delta stands out small and green against the moonscape appearance of the rest of the United Arab Republic.

On a low approach to Cairo airport the captain announces two "hugely big" pyramids to port side — prompting some 50 starboard passengers to drop their cool facades of bored and experienced jet-setters and scramble in one leap to crane and gawk, wide-eyed as 10-year-olds.

Barely visible beyond the pyramids in the grey-brown twilight are camouflaged aircraft and missile silos — the first of many we were to see in our 1,200 miles of jeep travel around the delta in the next week.

Partly hidden by shadow at the entrance to the Cairo air terminal, khaki-clad Egyptian soldiers stood solemnly behind sandbag sentry posts — semi-automatic rifles cradled prominently in their arms. The sentries are scattered throughout the main cities and at bridges, rail sites and highway checkpoints in the rural areas.

It was 30 degrees Celsius and pitch black when we cleared customs after 45 minutes and climbed into the back of an open Jeep for the ride to the Press-Radio-Television Centre in downtown Cairo to pick up press credentials.

As we pulled on to the freeway a truck hurtled past in the opposite direction without headlights — the standard procedure, we learned, when a string of cars, trucks, cabs and buses zipped past, honking and beeping with nary a trace of candlepower.

In the heart of town my jaw went slack as I grappled with the sights, sounds and smells of the city of six million.

It was about 8:30 and people were teeming into the streets from their sun-baked homes. There were as many people on the roadway as on the jammed sidewalks. They take their main meal, meet their friends and perhaps even pray in the streets before straggling home after midnight.

In the meantime, they dodge six non-lanes of traffic, choked with hundreds of white-fendered black Fiat cabs, army vehicles, donkey carts, Mercedes limousines with curtains drawn shut, kaftan-clad cyclists, trolley buses trams and motorbikes.

"Allah takes care of them," says our driver, Maj. Dave Preikshot, Ismailia base information officer.

Allah doesn't take care of them all, he adds. Some 609 of the city's inhabitants — mostly pedestrians — are killed each day in traffic mishaps.

Many times we almost clipped a boy or young woman who darted into our path only to turn, laugh and wave over a shoulder at us once safely on a curb or traffic island.

Some buses carried as many bodies on the roof and back bumper as inside. The rule is that if you don't sit down, you don't have to pay.

Low-grade gasoline kept the air black with exhaust and every inch of paved roadway was mirror-slick with oil build-up.

At the press centre I quickly learned the hard way that Arabic for "Women" doesn't look all that different from Arabic for "Men."

Because our jet was late we made the two-hour drive across the Arabian Desert to Ismailia at night — considered dangerous because of the heavy amount of unlit Egyptian military movement along the narrow road. Three Canadians died on the route last year in one crash.

Other than a sudden halt when nine camels wandered out of the palms into our path, we made it safely.

Driving at night we passed several mud-hut villages each having an open-fronted building where we could make out anywhere from 10 to 40 villagers seated in neat rows before a blue glow . . . television.

The UN base at Ismailia was built by the British 40 years ago. It was once a showplace lush with lawns, shrubs and blossoms — all returned to desert after Israeli shelling in the 1967 and 1973 wars and abandonment by the Egyptians.

After the '73 war the UN took army ingenuity and $400,000 and began restoration. Progress can still be seen daily and the gardens are beginning to bloom again: sewage, plumbing and water systems have been restored and recreation facilities are expanding.

Of some 5,000 UN troops in the Mid-east, 1,000 are Canadian.

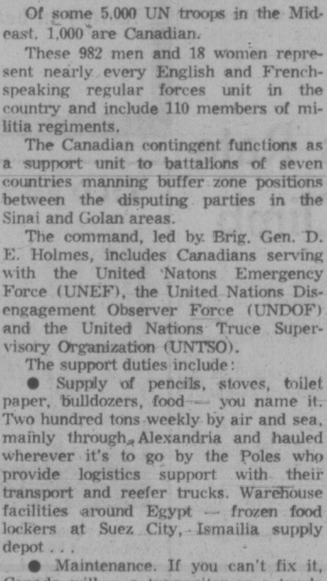
These 982 men and 18 women represent nearly every English and French-speaking regular forces unit in the country and include 110 members of militia regiments.

The Canadian contingent functions as a support unit to battalions of seven countries manning buffer zone positions between the disputing parties in the Sinai and Golan areas.

The command, led by Brig. Gen. D. E. Holmes, includes Canadians serving with the United Natons Emergency Force (UNEF), the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) and the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization (UNTSO).

The support duties include:

- Supply of pencils, stoves, toilet paper, bulldozers, food — you name it. Two hundred tons weekly by air and sea, mainly through Alexandria and hauled wherever it's to go by the Poles who provide logistics support with their transport and reefer trucks. Warehouse facilities around Egypt — frozen food lockers at Suez City, Ismailia supply depot . . .
- Maintenance. If you can't fix it, Canada will — a typewriter or a truck. "The first thing you do is kick it." says Holmes. "If it won't work then, they fix it. Things they haven't fixed before — they just use common sense."
- Movement control of all UN mail — a complete postal system. For their own reasons, the Poles don't participate in this.
- Communications. Canadians run the radio sets and move the messages with 73 Signal Squadron detachments in Cairo, Alexandria, Tel Aviv, Golan, Damascus and Ismailia.
- Air transport. Canada runs an entire air service between Israel, Cyprus, Beirut, Damascus, Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Ismailia — at least one flight per day with one of two Buffalo aircaft supplemented by a Swiss Fokker Friendship.



HOLMES . . . hollers for the best

As well as handle transport, the Polish contingent is responsible for mine clearance and operation of the UN Emergency Force hospital.

Holmes is a tough, bullet-head of a soldier largely respected because he pushes hard play as well as hard work.

He also wheels and deals to draw more support from Canada to improve the lot of the Canadian UN soldier beyond the lifestyle provided by UN funds.

Canadians in the Mid-East, says Holmes, are paid comparably to their civilian counterparts back home. In addition, there is a $129.33 foreign allowance, no charge for meals and 50 piasters (about $1.25) daily from the UN for soap, toothpaste, shaving cream.

"We came here . . . for eating sand, late papers, no Mac's Milk," says Holmes. "Nuts to everybody — we want the best. When we holler, we get it. Crest toothpaste . . . all that good stuff — all that booze and those Canadian cigarettes.

"I'm real proud for the support we get from Canada."

While overseas, each Canadian receives 14 days UN leave which must be taken in the theatre.

"We bought a $71,000 Mercedes bus — air conditioned, swivel seats — for R & R (rest and recreation)," continues Holmes. "We can offer a nine-day trip to the Holy Land, first class hotels, a complete tour with guides as needed — all the good sights . . . $70 per serviceman.

"A guy named Arthur Goldberg from Vancouver, strangely enough, set up these tours."

The Canadians, thanks to Holmes, are the only contingent in camp with beds — the others sleep on cots.

Other free items include nightly movies, laundry, squash and tennis lessons, haircuts and 27 hours of videotaped Canadian network television — last month's hockey games and Tarzan of the Apes in French, golf range, sailing, band lessons, camp newspaper and FM station and volleyball.

"All in all the fringe benefits are far superior to anything at home — but there's no bus or car, there are language problems, no restaurants, nightclubs or downtown movies," says Holmes.

Worse, there are no "other" people — family, old friends, new friends.

"You can only smoke so many 20 cent packs of cigarettes and drink so many $4 bottles of Crown Royal in a six-month stretch," one loneliness-fatigued non-commissioned officer said as a footnote to his statement that he had two weeks remaining in his tour and he had had enough.

We travelled out on to the Sinai through the Egyptian limited-forces buffer zone to the Swedish-patrolled UN zone.

Through the desert on the way there were countless incinerated Arab tanks and truck convoys stopped in their tracks by the Israelis in '67 and '73. Minefields abound but the Arab and Israelis who planted them are long dead and there are no maps.

A large white circle had been painted on each of the tanks indicating there were bodies inside. After the dead had been removed a large X was put in each circle.

Picture taking was taboo although we were allowed to snap the only Israeli tank we saw, as we whisked by at about 40 mph.

The once-beautiful city of Ismailia is slowly making a comeback after the two wars. During shelling in '73 only about 100 families of the total 220,000-person population remained.

Today the population now stands at about 180,000, said UN Emergency Force commander Lt.-Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo in an interview at his Ismailia villa.

"The decision to re-open the Suez Canal by June 5 will bring more people back," says Siilasvuo.

The Swedish general reports directly to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. He is cautiously optimistic about the prospects of peace in the Mid-East.

"The reason is that there is a great need for peace on both sides . . . and if there is a great need the two sides will find a way," he said.

The UN mission has been successful in preventing ceasefire violations, he said, largely because of the gap between Arab and Israeli.

"It's practically impossible for these two parties to reach each other. So an incident cannot take place if one local commander loses his cool. It has to come from above — a change of policy.

"There are limitations. We are between huge armies. We cannot match tanks and artillery but we have enough people to patrol and alert if there are any violations."

While the Canadians and Poles provide support, troops from Sweden, Ghana, Senegal, Indonesia and Finland cover the Sinai.

Although our baggage was lost for the first four days, we knew we were kept tabs on constantly as we covered the delta.

In the market at Ismailia the Egyptian police photographed us as we snapped the townsfolk.

Returning from an overnighter in Alexandria we spotted five tall-masted dhow coasting vessels in a canal alongside the highway. Because there were railway tracks in between, our accompanying Egyptian colonel advised us not to take photographs.

We persuaded him to let us cross the tracks and shoot the majestic boats away from a nearby canal bridge — also taboo.

He consented and we obtained our photos. About five miles later our UN Jeep met a roadblock — six soldiers, rifles drawn, waiting just for us.

Some fast and animated talking by our guide and we were away without incident.

The Egyptian base commander at Ismailia was visibly miffed when he sat down to a Canadian lunch one day and was presented with a bottle of Israeli ketchup smuggled in when the normal supply ran dry. The sauce is now poured into empty Heinz bottles kept for ketchup droughts.

Only on the trip to Alexandria did the presence of war seem to ease slightly. On the Mediterranean it was also cooler than the 126 degrees Farenheit at the Ismailia airfield.

In the 5,000-year-old city we stayed at the New Palestine Hotel adjacent to King Farouk's Palace. The hotel fronted on the sea and seemed to be a tourist mecca for winter-weary Soviets who arrived in droves by tour bus.

At the posh Windsor Palace we watched the art of belly-dancing — with accompaniment by an all-electric band, slick even by North American standards and capable of Latin, rock, and traditional Arab tunes.

Back south, to Suez city on the Gulf of Suez. There we saw a city of some 60,000 levelled by the two wars and being rebuilt by Egyptian manual laborers working from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day.

There are no bulldozers or jackhammers to hear — everything is done by hand. Even the reinforcement for a concrete apartment building is made of wood tied together with rope — without the use of nails.

At several main intersections in Suez there are Israeli Centurion tanks — stopped in their tracks in '73 when Arab soldiers strapped mines to their bodies and threw themselves under the machines.

Near Suez, Faisal City — named after the late Saudi Arabian king — is sprouting out of the sand in a maze of new highrise homes.

Driving the desert to Suez City or back you are apt to meet — as if out of nowhere — a platoon of gasmasked, rifle-toting Arab conscripts jogging up over the crest of a dune.

There are countless bunkers, armored vehicle compounds, airstrips, missile silos and thousands of trainee soldiers.

Troop training and military equipment are visible all along the five-hour route between Ismailia and Alexandria as well.

Billboards and posters of U.A.R. president Anwar Sadat are everywhere.

The day of departure for Cyprus we turned down lunch at the Canadian Embassy in favor of a trip to the pyramids.

Our sun-wrinkled guide Oyan Abraham (Number 156) steered us through a horde of junk jewelry hawkers after some of you (you guessed it) posed on camels all named Canada Dry.

After holding up our jet for 1½ hours without any apparent reason, the Egyptians allow us to depart for Cyprus.

We did not visit Israel from Egypt because the Arabs wouldn't let us back in if we did so. They never mention Israel as such, but only refer to "the other side" if they must make reference.

Part Two: Cyprus, on Thursday.

Mine Labor Shortage Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — The mining industry is expected to expand to three times its size during the next 25 years, "and we don't know where the manpower is going to come from," the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy was told Tuesday.

John Frey, dean of the Haileybury School of Mines, said continuing labor shortages in remote areas might become "such a critical factor" that many vital mineral development projects would have to be delayed.

He said the problem arose because the Canadian population is not increasing as fast as the "resource industries, which are experiencing a stiff competition for engineers and technical graduates, he said.

At the same time, demand for operating personnel, tradesmen and technicians is increasing which might slow projects such as development of the Alberta oil sands, expansion of the coal industry and construction of oil and gas pipelines.

Otto Fisher, a federal government economist, cited estimates by the Mining Association of Canada that labor shortages caused a $320-million loss in production last year and that hiring and training new employees cost at least $48 million.

A forecast from the federal department of energy, mines and resources indicates that labor requirements in mining will likely rise at an annual average rate of about 2.5 per cent until the year 2000, compared with an average 1.5 to 2.0 per cent during the last 25 years.

A. R. Walsh of J. S. Redpath Ltd., North Bay, Ont., an Arctic project engineer, said mining projects in the high Arctic have low labor turnover rates and almost no absenteeism despite long working hours.

As well, Walsh said, the number of accidents per man hour worked is "considerably lower" than on the company's southern projects.

He agreed with other speakers that companies must offer strong financial incentives and good living conditions to attract the required quality of labor.

Shopping Centres Swing to Core

CALGARY (CP) — A trend towards downtown shopping centres is surfacing in western Canada, says Stan Witkin, senior vice-president of Cadillac Fairview Corp.'s shopping centre division.

"I firmly believe the new downtown complexes will be able to regain some of the growth which was taken away in the last five years by the suburban centres," he said.

Downtown centres have historically been able to provide a better variety of stores, higher operating standards and a larger volume of business, explained Witkin.

Cadillac Fairview is the proprietor of 32 major shopping centres across Canada. The firm opened the first major downtown centre in western Canada, Vancouver's Pacific Centre. Now the Toronto-based company is involved in the construction of Toronto's $200-million Eat Centre, to be located in the heart of downntown.

"There may be some larger development in eastern Canada, but a quick look at the activity across the west shows downtown centre development underway in Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

The two Alberta cities are particularly suited to the new trend, said Witkin.

"Both Edmonton and Calgary have a tremendous number of new office buildings being built in their downtowns, and in a way it is only natural that a major shopping revision take place in the core areas."

He said that in many cities, "the downtown is a classic model of a large shopping centre with the department stores at both ends pulling traffic flows across a number of blocks."

A successful downtown centre would link the major stores either at street level or by walkways.

An example of this is the proposed Cadillac development in downtown Winnipeg, which would seek two department stores linked by a six- or seven-block series of malls, said Witkin.

While the outlook for shopping centres in downtown areas is bright, actual construction can pose some problems.

Underground construction is expensive, as is linking buildings over long distances, he said.

In addition, "the time factor from concept to opening has become much longer with the result that risks have become much greater in virtually each and every project."

Today's projects require financial stability and expertise capable of seeing a project through five or six years of planning, he said.

TERM-DEPOSIT RATES-RISING

TORONTO (CP) — Three major banks have raised their term deposit rates following similar moves by trust companies.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Royal Bank of Canada are offering 7½ per cent for all terms between one and six years on deposits between $1,000 and $100,000.

The rates had previously ranged between 6¾ per cent and 7½ per cent for the Commerce and seven to 7½ per cent for the Royal Bank.

Changes were also made in the rates for terms of less than a year for deposits between $5,000 and $100,000.

The Toronto-Dominion Bank's revised rates for less than a year range from 6½ to seven per cent, up from 6¼ to 6¾ per cent, and for terms of more than a year, from seven and a quarter to 7½ per cent, an increase from 6¾ to 7½ per cent.

The Bank of Montreal and the Bank of Nova Scotia have not raised their rates.

The rise in the banks' term deposit rates ends a period of falling rates that began in November, 1974.

Relocation Realty

TORONTO (CP) — Four Canadian real estate companies have announced they have formed a new company to help employees who are being transferred across the country.

H. Keith Ltd. of Toronto, Melton Real Estate Ltd. of Edmonton, Westgate Realties Inc. of Montreal and Gardiner Realty Ltd. of Fredericton, N.B., have signed an agreement to form Relocation Management Services Ltd.

In a release, Ardis McArthur, vice-president of the new company, said there are 20,000 employees transferred each year in Canada.

He said the amalgamation will give the new company 150 branch offices across Canada and representation in every community over 20,000.

Handling both sale and purchase of an employee's home the company will also offer mortgage and insurance services.

Computer terminals will be in effect in 1976 for fast transmission of agreements, contracts and other housing information, Mr. McArthur said.

Ionarc Reshuffled For Aussie Venture

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Ionarc Smelters Ltd. have passed resolutions to reorganize the company, increase its capitalization, provide for the issue of shares in exchange for outstanding debentures and provide the financial base for a major joint venture.

The number of authorized shares was increased to 10 million from 5 million and the shares will have no par value.

The joint venture provides for the issue to Buka Minerals N.L. of Australia of 1,750,000 shares at 20 cents to raise $350,000 (Canadian). This is to be the basis of financing a joint venture in commercial application of the Ionarc heat technology to titanium metal production.

Ionarc secretary Lauch Farris said the company is negotiating on three major joint ventures, including the Buka project and two others which are confidential.

The Australian venture is looking for a major participant to help finance a $4 million pilot plant.

Farris reported that overhead has been reduced by closing Ionarc's Vancouver office and selling the refrigeration and automation divisions at Bow, N.H.

New Barker At Marpole

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Rayonier Canada Ltd. spokesman says the company is installing a $400,000 mechanical barker at its Marpole lumber manufacturing division to replace a 25-year-old hydraulic unit.

Frank Gartner, manager of lumber operations, said installation is expected to be completed within two weeks. At that time, the plant will resume two-shift operations.

The plant, operating on one shift since last July, shut for two weeks beginning last Monday. Some drying, shipping and planing is continuing during the period.

Gartner said the two-shift operation will be continued if market conditions permit.

Installation of the new mechanical barker will reduce steam consumption and eliminate the escape of wood debris from this source into the Fraser River, he said.

Breads and Cereals

Bread . . . the staff of life! Bread has been a basic food for many hundreds of years.

Whole grain cereals and bread are preferred as they contain protein, B Vitamins and minerals in their natural state. They also contain bulk, an important part of our diet which is concerning nutritionists more and more.

Many people, however, have developed a taste for white bread in which the roughage, where the vitamins and minerals, have been removed. If this is your choice, be sure to eat ENRICHED cereals and cereal products to regain the B Vitamins and minerals.

Whole grain cereals that you cook yourself, like rolled oats, are very nourishing and much cheaper than processed breakfast cereals. Try to include them in your meal planning.

The Daily Food Guide recommends 3 servings of whole grain or enriched cereals every day. One serving could be ¾ cup cooked cereal like oatmeal, 1 cup dry cereal, 1 slice wholegrain or enriched bread, ¾ cup pasta, such as spaghetti, macaroni or noodles (be sure it is enriched), or ½ cup cooked brown or converted rice.

Serve one serving at each meal to help balance your diet.

Try different types of whole grain or enriched cereals. The more variety the better!

WATERFRONT LIBRARY?

Victoria city council agreed Tuesday to study a proposal that the former Ocean Cement property on the Inner Harbor be the site for a new central library.

The idea was put forward by Ald. Clyde Savage, the city's representative on the Greater Victoria Library Board, who said it had arisen in discussion with Ald. Sam Bawlf.

Savage said construction of a new library building on the waterfront site, possibly with other cultural amentities included and underground parking, would free the present library at Yates and Blanshard for other uses.

The original Carnegie library building at that location could be retained as a heritage building and used as an information centre for tourists, while the newer 1956 addition could be sold for offices.

Bawlf told council that downtown land is now so expensive that it is "just beyond our means" to contemplate any new purchases for a library site, and the only practical alternative is to earmark property already under public ownership.

Earlier this year Bawlf suggested municipalities might acquire the Government Street Post Office for library use, as a result of postal modernization plans in this area.

But he said Tuesday he has since learned that any space there vacated by the Post Office will be needed for federal government office expansion.

Rebate Cheques Arrive, Appeals Hit Tax Office

It's appeal time at the district taxation office now that tax rebate cheques are beginning to be delivered in numbers to Victorians.

Along with the cheque will be an official notice of assessment. In some cases, instead of a cheque, the letter will contain a bill for money owing the government.

Regardless of what the verdict is, the taxpayer has a right to lodge an appeal.

In a typical year, there will be 10 appeals for every 1,000 taxpayers.

The official assessment is made at Ottawa and is announced at the time of the issuing of the refund cheque (or bill). Some weeks after that, however, a reassessment may be issued.

The reassessments are made at the local tax office on the basis of a second check of a taxpayer's form. At the local level, the department will survey deductions in detail to see they are reasonable. For example, some taxpayers are entitled to deduct car expenses without submitting receipts. If the estimate they make is unreasonable, the local office can make a reassessment.

Whether the taxpayer objects to the assessmest made at Ottawa or the reassessment at the local level, the appeal procedure is the same.

First step is to phone an assessing officer at 388-3551 to discuss the problem with him.

He will explain the rule or policy that led to the assessment. Many disputes are resolved at this point, if the taxpayer is satisfied with the explanation.

If he is not, he may launch a formal appeal.

A notice-of-objection form may be obtained from the district taxation office at 1415 Vancouver St.

This form must be sent by registered mail to the deputy minister of Revenue Canada, Taxation, Ottawa, within 90 days of the mailing date of the assessment notice.

An appeal officer at the local office will be notified by Ottawa and he will begin an informal hearing, getting a report from the assessing officer and listening to the views of the taxpayer.

The taxpayer may be present during all stages of the investigation by the appeals officer.

If the decision of the appeals officer goes against the taxpayer, a further appeal is possible to the regional office in Vancouver.

Beyond that, it is possible to go all the way up to the Supreme Court of Canada for amounts involving more than $10,000.

Que. Building Clean-Up Urged

QUEBEC (CP)—Opposition cries for the resignation of Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer greeted tabling in the national assembly Tuesday of the Cliche Commission report urging a major clean-up of the Quebec construction industry.

Employers, union leaders and government personnel shared the blame for the spread of rampant lawlessness and confusion in the industry, the 603-page report said.

The commission declined to rule on the role played by Mr. Cournoyer in the industry's deterioration. The report suggested it will be up to the electorate to pass judgment on charges of employers and unions that the labor minister failed to demand respect for the law and gave preferential treatment to the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) over Quebec's two other labor groups.

Among the main changes proposed in the report by commission chairman Judge Robert Cliche and his two fellow commissioners are:

—Imposition of three-year trusteeships on the Montreal locals of electricians', plumbers' and heavy equipment operators' unions affiliated to the QFL, also on the Montreal-based Local 89 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

—Creation of a regulatory "construction agency" to replace the corruption-riddled Construction Industry Commission (CIC) in administering wages and working conditions in the industry.

—Abolition of union hiring halls and putting responsibility for job placement of all construction workers in the hands of the proposed construction agency.

—Institution of five-year plans for construction projects, aimed at stabilising the industry, and the introduction of job security and guaranteed income for construction workers.

—Licensing by the department of financial institutions of all contractors to guarantee their solvency and competence.

The three-man inquiry was established by the Liberal government in March, 1974, after the main job site of the James Bay hydroelectric power project in northwestern Quebec was ransacked.

Many of the industry's problems stemmed from the infiltration of leadership positions of three QFL-affiliated construction unions by criminal elements during the last five years, the report says.

These unions—Local 791 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 144 of the United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Trades of the United States and Canada, and Local 1677 of the Interprovincial Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—should be placed in the hands of three-man boards of trustees, the commission urges.

The report says trusteeship is the only way to eliminate corrupt elements from the unions and to prevent the comeback of Andre Desjardins, former leader of the QFL's 23-union construction wing.

The report describes Desjardins as an unscrupulous power-grabber who tolerated criminal activities in the unions and who opened the door to underworld infiltration.

To guard against abuses by employers and government officers, the report recommends a tighter government and rank-and-file scrutiny of union affairs. It also urges codification of all construction laws with stiffer penalties for employers or workers who offer, give or receive payoffs.

Those with criminal records would be barred from holding union office for five years following their admission to the union.

A special section of the justice department would lay all charges for industry violations before a proposed construction tribunal.

Unions should be incorporated and be required to submit yearly financial statements to the department of financial institutions.

To prevent dictatorship by union hierarchies, union elections and collective agreements would have to be ratified by a secret ballot among the general membership.

For negotiating purposes, employers would have to be represented by a single association established specifically to handle labor relations.

On the union side, only a union or unions grouping at least 75 per cent of workers would have the right to sign a collective agreement.

The report was submitted to the government last week by Judge Cliche and fellow commissioners Brian Mulroney, a Montreal management lawyer, and Guy Chevrette of Joliette, Que., a vice-president of the Quebec Teachers' Corporation.

Firm Wins $1.5M

SASKATOON (CP) — Central Canada Potash Co. was awarded damages of $1.5 million in Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday after a trial that had challenged Saskatchewan government regulations as unconstitutional.

The company, in a trial that began last October and lasted 21 days, had charged that government's prorationing regulations on potash were unconstitutional.

The judgment was handed down by Mr. Justice D. C. Disbery in a 221-page document, nearly six months after the trial ended.

It was believed to be the longest judgment and possibly the highest award in damages in Saskatchewan.

The court declined to give judgment against either the provincial attorney-general or the minister of mineral resources in their personal capacities.

Central Canada Potash Co. was awarded costs.

Grain Bill Opposed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government repeated its "serious reservations" Tuesday about proposals contained in the federal government's Prairie Grain Stabilization Act.

In a presentation prepared for the senate committee on agriculture in Ottawa, the province said the bill will not fulfil its expressed purpose of protecting farmers against losses due to economic events beyond their control.

Blame Assessed

EDMONTON (CP) — Blame for skyrocketing land prices should not be put on developers but on public demand and red tape, says the Urban Development Institute of Alberta.

The institute, service organization for the development industry in the province, made the claim in a short brief presented Tuesday to the provincial government's land use forum.

The brief, noting escalating land costs, said there is an implication that unreasonable profits are being made and a feeling that public land banking is needed to protect home buyers.

Deficit for Autopac

WINNIPEG (CP) — Autopac general manager J. O. Dutton said Tuesday the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation could end the current fiscal year with another deficit.

Speaking to the legislature's public utilities committee, Dutton said at best the corporation will break even. It already has lost $5 million in the first four months of the fiscal year which began last October.

The accumulated deficit of Autopac now stands at $19.3 million.

Cardinal Praised

SASKATOON (CP) — Donald Coggan, archbishop of Canterbury, paid tribute Tuesday to Josef Cardinal Mindszenty who died earlier in the day in Vienna.

The leader of the Anglican church called the long-time primate of Hungary, who spent almost 23 years in prison or exile as a result of Communist oppression in his country, "a very brave man indeed."

"He went through the most appalling years of imprisonment and beatings for his Christian faith," Archbishop Coggan said in an interview.

Target: That First Job

Manpower Nudges Merchants To Employ the Inexperienced

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The word has gone out from Canada Manpower to Victoria businessmen to hire the inexperienced worker this summer.

"We realize it is difficult for young people to get their first job because they lack experience," Canada Manpower counsellor D. N. Yearwood said in an interview.

"So we are meeting with Victoria merchants and urging them to make some jobs available for those who are enthusiastic but have no experience.

"They have indicated that they will do this."

Yearwood said the merchants will be judging most young applicants on the basis of enthusiasm and personality rather than on experience and skills.

For this reason, young people should not be discouraged but should keep knocking on doors asking for work.

He said the job situation at the moment is a bit difficult for young people — but it would get better soon.

When the Canada Manpower youth office opened at 824 Johnson on April 28 more than 400 people registered in the first day applying for the 20 jobs available.

At the same time last year there were about 150 jobs listed.

The low number this year is due to the municipal labor dispute and the slow beginning to the tourist season.

Yearwood said tourist-oriented businesses have indicated they will be hiring young people later this month. The total number of jobs on the Canada Manpower youth board is expected to rise to 100 by month's end.

At the same time, there will be about 400 other jobs available that have not been listed at the Canada Manpower office. These can be obtained by going directly to the companies involved.

The present scarcity of jobs has been particularly devastating for university students who are normally at work by May.

"Last year, they were particular about the type of work they were doing but this year they are taking anything available," Yearwood said.

With the end of the municipal strike, about 50 to 60 jobs will become available in the form of playground supervisors and lifeguards. The lifeguards must first take a course at a community swimming pool.

Jobs that are expected to become more plentiful this month, with the increased tourist flow, include waitresses and bus boys, chambermaids and cleaning personnel.

B.C. Ferries will be hiring summer help and young people will be needed to assist with heavy labor projects. These jobs include carrying lumber for construction projects and lighter work with road crews such as raking and traffic control.

Despite the present job shortage, young people are being urged to register at the Canada Manpower youth office, to check the job board and watch the newspapers for job opportunities.

"Knocking on doors is still the most effective way to get a job," Yearwood said.

"If an employer is impressed by your enthusiasm the chances are good he will hire you, knowing you will learn the job quickly."

Dock's Toilets Called Racist

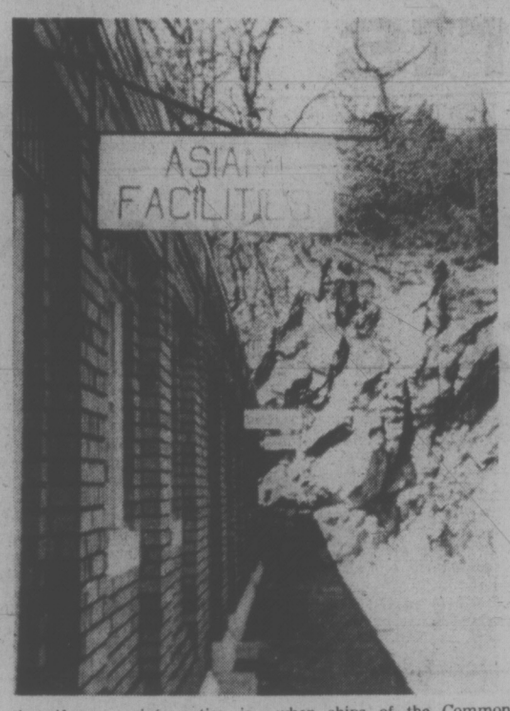
A sign over a washroom at the federal government's graving dock in Esquimalt which reads "Asian Facilities" is offensive, obnoxious and racist, a union official says.

Federal Public Works Minister C. M. Drury has been asked in a letter to take immediate action by instructing the dock superintendent to remove the sign which marks special toilet facilities for Asian seamen.

The letter, written by Victoria Boilermakers' Union business manager Neil Hindle, says that Hindle has discussed the sign several times with David Holmes, the graving dock superintendent, "and I regret to say he would not comply with my request to remove and change this obnoxious and racist sign."

A spokesman in the superintendent's office said Holmes was out of the office until Thursday.

The toilets in the "Asian Facilities" consist of two foot marks on the floor and a draining hole in the floor — a system widely used in Mid-Eastern and Asian countries.



Hindle says in the letter that if appropriate action is not taken by the public works department, he will recommend that members of the trade union movement boycott the graving dock.

Hindle suggests that because the dock is a federal port of entry, international symbols, such as those used in airports and other public buildings, should be used.

"The use of international symbols is . . . what is called for in this situation, especially when ships of the Commonwealth, as well as other nations, frequent this area and to be greeted with this racist sign can only bring shame to all Canadians," Hindle says in the letter.

Hindle said today he wasn't suggesting that regular toilets be installed, only that the international symbols be used.

It is likely that many Asian seamen would not be able to read the sign anyway, as it is printed only in English.

Outdoor Journal Won't Show

For the first time since it appeared in March, 1974, the Victoria-based Vancouver Island's Outdoor Journal will not be published this Thursday.

The tabloid weekly, with a circulation of nearly 7,000 has run into financial trouble.

Accountant Frank Lee said today the journal was also faced with editorial problems. He said Jack Paskavan, the former editor quit his job suddenly and left for somewhere in the United States.

The Journal was the only weekly of its kind in Canada, focussing on outdoor activities such as fishing, hunting, hiking and camping, and dealing with environmental and conservation issues.

"We had a paid subscription of nearly 3,000 and had newsstand sales of about 4,000 so there's a call for this sort of thing," Lee said. "It could still be a viable operation if somebody stepped in with more expertise."

He said between $6,000 and $7,000 was needed immediately to put the Journal back on its financial feet. Publication will cease until financial backing is available.

The Journal generally ran 12 to 16 tabloid pages and was popular with conservationists and others interested in the outdoors.

CUPE Lists Priorities For Saanich Talks

Counter-proposals listing eight contract priorities will be presented by Saanich municipal workers when negotiations sought by their union resume within a few days.

The members of Local 374 Canadian Union of Public Employees meanwhile are due back at their jobs Thursday, the last of a total of more than 1,700 civic and school workers to do so after disruption of local services in an area strike-lockout that started Jan. 27.

The Saanich CUPE unit held out for further negotiations dealing with parochial matters rather than accept an area-wide settlement proposal adopted by the municipalities and four CUPE locals to provide substantial wage gains in a two-year contract.

Local 374 president Jim Brett said union's proposals had been given executive endorsation and would be described to a regular meeting of the membership today.

Sidney inside and outside staff is in a similar position to Saanich, having rejected the area proposal. Arrangements for negotiation are expected to be broached Thursday.

In Esquimalt, the staff was back at work today following the lifting of the lockout effective Tuesday. The union seeks renegotiation of local matters in this municipality, too, but talks will not start until the Labor Relations Board has decided whether the lockout was illegal, as the union claims.

Brett said Saanich Local 374 will make "reasonable requests" for contract provisions applicable in Saanich.

"We're not asking for the moon," he said, indicating there are "some priority items here that the members feel strongly about it."

They include definition of a tradesman's rate for certified employees, rather than an hourly differential; non-discriminatory shift differentials; application of the area wage increase to provide improvement to the middle range of inside workers.

In addition, the local wants overtime to be on a voluntary basis, an increment in the premium paid for dirty jobs such as sewer work, redefinition of severance pay without being tied to pension money, rewording of a condition of settlement dealing with union disciplinary action to avoid conflict with the CUPE constitution, and an LRB ruling on contract language dealing with coverage during the period between contracts.

In Saanich and Esquimalt, councils have taken a firm stand that any further negotiating must not tamper with the monetary aspects of the area settlement.

Non-union senior personnel in the area, who tried to maintain essential services during the dispute are putting staffs back to work on a priority basis in Victoria, Oak Bay, Sidney and Esquimalt, where disposal of temporary garbage dumps rates high. Normal garbage collection will not be apparent for weeks in some areas.

Young Lady In Big Hurry

The lady was not for waiting but had trouble convincing those about her.

Shortly before 6 a.m. today she started to kick and complain.

Her father, Alan Planes, 21, of 5621 Sooke, thought it was a false alarm but her mother Laurie, 19, had her doubts. She called a sister-in-law, Karen Planes, of 337 Henry, in Victoria, for help.

Karen thought it was a false alarm too. She took her time driving out and when she arrived Alan left for work.

On the drive into town Laurie let out a yelp.

Karen realized she wouldn't be able to reach Victoria in time. She stopped the car and raced to a house at 3061 Sooke Road where a startled Joyce Watson let them in.

Mrs. Watson put fresh sheets on her bed and Laurie walked calmly into the room.

Minutes later, said Mrs. Watson, there was "a little cry."

Mother and the as yet unnamed daughter are doing fine in Victoria General Hospital.

DAVE LEWIS . . . moving 48 years

Juggling two huge pianos across this broad nation — and back — just wouldn't be most people's idea of fun.

But to Dave Lewis, for nearly half a century Victoria's piano-mover supreme, it's a cinch.

Dave returned recently from two long concert tours with Victoria pianists Robin and Winifred Wood and says "there was plenty of sweating, but no problems."

Arranged by the Overture Concerts Association under well-known bassoon player and impressario George Zukerman of Vancouver, the first tour took the Woods through Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. and the second started at Oshawa in Ontario and ended in Edmonton.

★

Together the two tours covered more than 12,000 miles. And that's a lot of piano-hauling. But as Robin points out, they took two grand pianos — two matched Yamahas — "because getting one good piano in a hall is pretty difficult but getting two pianos matched is almost impossible."

Mostly Robin and his wife flew the longer distances. The tough part was left to Lewis. And the toughest thing was that at each place volunteers helped him get the pianos off and on the truck.

"And some of these were just kids who happened to be playing basketball there at the time," he laughs. "It was cold in a lot of the places and sometimes I had to put up a ramp to get over snow as high as that window."

For each move, the legs and lid had to be taken off the grand pianos and then put back on inside the hall.

"In all, I knocked 'em down and put 'em together again 48 times," says Dave.

The Woods played the standard repertoire for two pianos — Variations on a Theme of Beethoven by Saint-Saens, Mozart's Sonata for Two Pianos, and Rachmaninoff's Suite No. 2 plus a number of Robin's own arrangements. Their concerts were well received by audiences that averaged 350 but grew to about 800 in Nelson, B.C., and even more than that in Edmonton.

They certainly aren't lacking in experience.

"We've played two pianos together since we were married in 1948," says Robin.

Their story, in fact, is one of romance at the keyboard.

Robin, born in Victoria and Winifred Scott, a former child prodigy in Winnipeg, met on a boat on the way to England. Both were heading for studies at the Royal Academy of Music in London.

They married in England and lived in London for 19 years. For 10 of those years they both taught music at the Royal Academy.

The Woods returned to Canada in 1965 and in 1966 Robin took over as principal of the Victoria Conservatory of Music. Then, it had only 60 students in a building on Pandora Avenue. Today, with Robin as principal and Winifred as vice-principal, the Academy is based in the historic old Craigdarroch Castle and has more than 1,500 students from all over the western provinces, the United States, Hong Kong and even a couple from England.

Their love of music has been inherited by their children, 15-year-old Ben and 11-year-old Laura. Both are pianists and Laura played in the just-concluded Victoria Music Festival.

David Evan Lewis, who as his name tells is of Welsh origin, has also led a life filled with music — and not just from the pianos he's been shoving around.

"All the family used to sing," he says distantly, "and my mother, who died recently at the age of 93, sang in the Vic West United Church Choir for 55 years."

★

Dave himself was born in Lethbridge, Alberta, and came to Victoria in 1918 when, he says, "there were only 22,000 people here."

Big fists and hard work have kept him out of trouble and in business all his life.

Dave relied on his fists to score quick knockouts while reigning as lightweight boxing champion of B.C. and Alberta and his large, strong hands have helped him in the moving business.

A past Commodore of the Capital City Yacht Club, a member of Metchosin Golf Club and of both the Eagles and Pro-Pats, Dave Lewis was a boxing instructor for the First Battalion Canadian Scots for 16 years. He still watches all the fights and rates "Gassius Clay as the greatest heavyweight ever."

Dave is proud of the fact he has never been sick.

"I'm 66 and I've still got everything I was born with," he says.

But, he says, he quit school when he was 13 "and I've worked like a slave ever since."

He started in Victoria with Morrows Cartage, then went to Pacific Transfer and finally Dowells before setting off on his own with Lewis Cartage and a career as the "piano-moving expert."

He has built up a reputation that has given him piano-hauling contracts with practically every major firm in the city. He has moved instruments for the Victoria Symphony Orchestra for 45 years.

Among other things, of course, Lewis Cartage moves about 60 pianos a week and Dave says the piano is coming back into vogue.

"I move for every piano teacher in Victoria and they are all overloaded with students and can't take any more," he says. "Seems everyone is buying pianos."

After 48 years it's really the end of the piano road for David Lewis. He just hasn't stepped off it yet, that's all.

Officially, he has retired and son Ronald (one of his three children) now owns and runs Lewis Cartage. But with a piano, there's still no one like Dave.

"Oh, Ronald is 32 and a good mover," says his dad. But he admits with a big grin that he still keeps an eye on things.

"I just can't trust him . . . he doesn't do things like I used to."

9.8-Mill Hike Faces Oak Bay

Oak Bay council began snipping away Tuesday night at a record $7.4 million budget for 1975, an increase of 23 per cent over actual expenditures in 1974.

Without severe pruning, taxpayers are looking at a 9.81 mill increase for general purposes and debt over the 1974 figure of 46.68 mills.

After three hours of budget consideration, which produced a net reduction of $10,000, council scheduled further meetings for Monday and Tuesday.

Several council members said "it is obvious" Oak Bay will be paying as much for nine months work this year as was paid for 12 months last year, when there wasn't a lockout of employees.

Biggest single expenditure is $2.6 million for transfers of money to other jurisdictions for services, an increase of $456,965, but this is an area where Mayor Brian Smith said council has no control.

The biggest transfer sum is $2.4 million for schools compared with $2.1 million last year. School levies are set by the Greater Victoria school board.

Other major expenditures include:

—Police and fire services $1,207,742 ($1,022,272 last year);

—Debt charges $653,198 ($364,756), raising the debt mill rate to 9.2 from 4.63. Smith said the increase was for borrowing for land purchases and the recreation and cannot be changed;

Transportation services (including engineering, municipal yard, streets) $589,420 ($517,325).

Recreation and cultural services, including the Oak Bay Recreation Centre due to open this fall, came to $457,823 compared with $318,046 last year.

Smith said assessments of "just about everyone" are frozen at 1974 levels "so people will see a higher mill rate by that factor alone."

Townhouse Hearing Thursday

An application for a land-use contract that would permit a 25-unit townhouse development on property at Esquimalt Road and Robert Street will be considered by Victoria City council at a public hearing Thursday.

Already standing on the property at 527 Esquimalt Road is Muirhead House, a heritage building which the developers claim they cannot integrate in their scheme.

The firm, Farmers and Merchants Trust Ltd., has offered the home to the city or its nominated agent at no charge, and city housing officials are discussing with Victoria West community representatives the feasibility of moving the building.

Start Next Week On Mall Project

A construction start on the Government Street Mall, delayed by the civic dispute, is likely by the middle of next week, city engineer John Sansom said today.

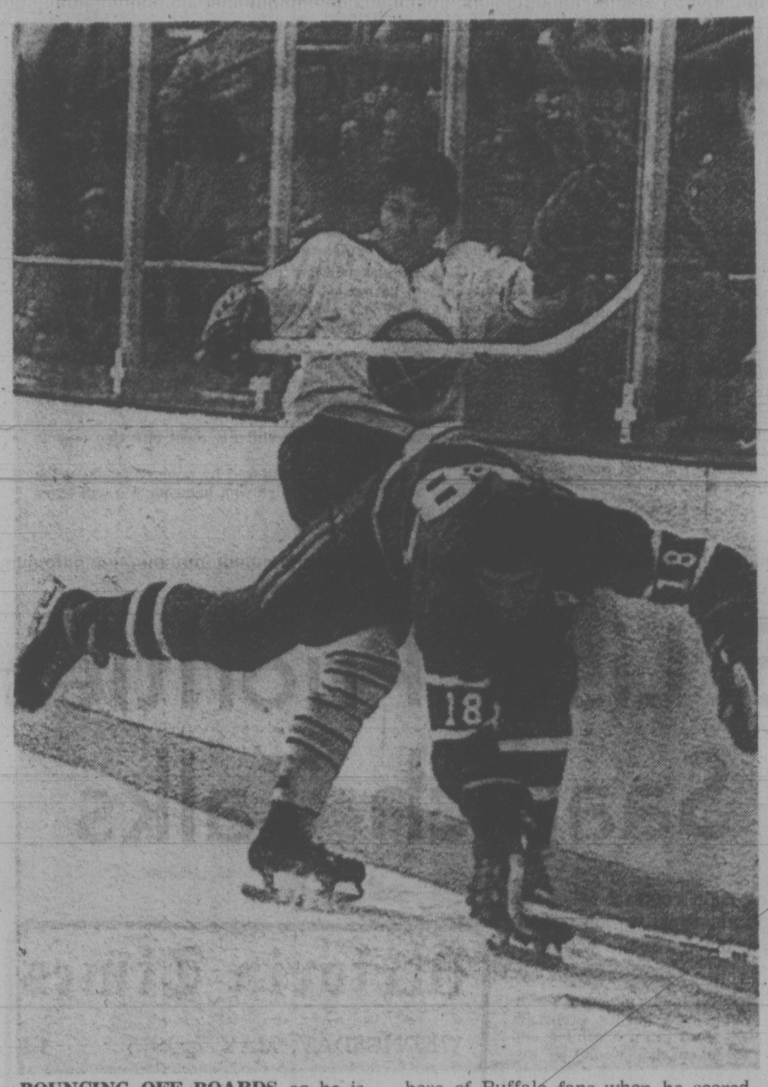
Work will start at the Wharf Street end and two or three blocks of the five-block-long mall should be completed by the end of June.

The project will then be halted to avoid congestion during the peak tourist season, and completed in the fall.

Sansom said Government will have to be closed to traffic over the affected sections while work is in progress.

The city will try to divert normal southbound traffic on Government along Bay to Blanshard, while light traffic will be able to use Wharf or Douglas.

Spat in Corridor Caps Sabres' Overtime Win



BOUNCING OFF BOARDS as he is squeezed out of play by Montreal's Serge Savard (18) is Rene Robert of Buffalo Sabres. Robert later became hero of Buffalo fans when he scored in overtime to give Sabres 5-4 victory and 3-2 lead in Stanley Cup hockey semi-final playoff. (AP Wirephoto)

BUFFALO (CP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens was explaining what he thought was the turning point in Tuesday night's fifth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final won by Buffalo Sabres 5-4 in overtime.

"We had it under control until the penalty to Risebrough," Bowman said, referring to a tripping call by referee Lloyd Gilmour against Montreal centre Doug Risebrough at 13:02 of the third period.

"I heard Lloyd Gilmour say on the radio he wouldn't call a penalty in the neutral zone."

At that point, Scotty Morrison, National Hockey League referee-in-chief, emerged from the officials' dressing room. Bowman spotted him and the two became embroiled in a three-minute shouting match.

Morrison, who has heard Bowman criticize his officials before, told the Montreal coach he would like to see him say the officials had done a good job when the Canadiens had lost.

Bowman at one point accused Morrison of not liking him and at one stage there was a reference made to a recent Bowman statement that referee Wally Harris did not like the Montreal coach.

The argument drew a small crowd of fans, reporters and policemen and even some players peeked out of their dressing rooms to see what was going on.

Finally, Morrison wheeled away and Bowman brushed past the group of waiting reporters and said: "That's your referee-in-chief."

It is the second time in this best-of-seven semi-final series that Bowman has berated the work of the officials. In the second game he was visibly upset over the work of Ron Wicks.

The Canadiens were leading Tuesday's game 4-3 after Jimmy Roberts' third-period goal when Risebrough's penalty brought out the Buffalo power play which tied the score 4-4 on Craig Ramsay's second goal of the game.

The Sabres then mounted a strong attack and had good chances to win in regulation time.

"Nobody likes to go into overtime," said Rene Robert who scored the winning goal at 5:56 of the overtime period. "You like to get it over quickly.'"

The win gave the Sabres a 3-2 lead in the series which resumes Thursday in Montreal.

Besides Ramsay's two goals, the Sabres got scores from Fred Stanfield and Gil Perreault. Jacques Lemaire, Yvan Cournoyer, Risebrough and Roberts scored for Montreal.

The Sabres had a 45-19 edge in shots, including a 6-1 edge in the overtime period.

Coach Floyd Smith of the Sabres admitted that goalie Ken Dryden of Montreal "had us worried for a while."

On the winning goal, Robert stationed himself in the slot and took Perreault's pass off a faceoff and fired the puck past the Montreal goalie from close range.

"I was just trying to shoot on the net," said Robert. "He (Dryden) didn't even move. He didn't have time. They were screening him."

The overtime win was the Sabres' second over Montreal in this series. They won the first game here on Danny Gare's overtime goal at 4:42.

Both Smith and Robert agreed Tuesday's win was vital to the Sabres, who had lost the previous two games in Montreal by 7-0 and 8-2 scores.

"We had to get going again," said Smith. "It was a good win for us. We needed it."

"We took two beatings," Robert said. "It was good for us to get beaten real bad. It makes you realize you aren't the only team on the ice. We worked hard when we got back. It paid off."

The Charade Goes On; Ask 'Phaintin' Phil'

When George Foreman fought five stiffs in one day at Toronto recently and his effort was shown on the big screen in the living room, it stirred at least one watcher, and reader, to ask:

"If boxing is the great American sport, this effort has to rank as the world's worst . . . and why don't you give more space to professional wrestling? At least, a spectator there gets his dollar's worth; and wrestlers are athletes, probably more so than some of the boxers who went into the ring against Foreman. Foisting this sport as entertainment on a gullible public is bad enough, but persisting in it is worse."

So, who's going to argue, and maybe the wrestlers do have a better presentation at that. Because from the very beginning of the Foreman fiasco the result was a foregone conclusion. In wrestling the winners change, week to week. Oh, sure, there might have been a "lucky punch", but they were saying the same about another heavyweight from the past several years ago. And if his name cropped up recently, perhaps you've forgotten.

In the golden-age of Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, Philip Suffing Scott was a British heavyweight who travelled to the United States from time to time to augment his income; and he is generally given credit for giving the fight industry one of its most-famous and oft-quoted aphorisms: "If Phil Scott couldn't kill boxing, nothing will."

It Was Called Swooning

Some of the youngsters in the house may not recall Scott, but he was famous in his time for mostly the wrong reasons. Somebody named Knute Hansen once knocked him out in one round. Against Jack Sharkey, he lasted for three, but quickly reverted to type when he met Young Stribling, a light-heavyweight. He was stopped in one round.

It was not his quick pratfalls in the ring that gained for Scott an eminence among the horizontal heavyweights of his time. Because the record book also reveals that Scott won six bouts by claiming foul. This was an art called swooning, otherwise known today as an academy performance, and it earned him the dubious honor of being labelled "Phaintin' Phil". And that is exactly how he is listed in the Ring Magazine record book.

Sure, the latest attempt by Foreman to drum up business in the fight game was effrontery, but it sold, and that's all that counts, isn't it? And when Muhammad Ali appeared as a color man for Howard Cosell, this was the crutch telling the people that boxing wasn't really falling on dark days, but rather the assurance that Ali was so worried about dear George that he almost got into a fight with his most serious challenger himself. This was the confession for all to see that theirs is a heated and hate-filled rivalry.

Why not the sham? In the heavyweight division there is only one fighter of consequence below Ali and Foreman. Joe Frazier is the only one who qualifies as a household name, unless you add a new one to the list of heir-pretenders. Joe Bugner, the European champ, is trying to arouse the scant interest that is left on the scene for Ali, before he meets Foreman in his multi-million dollar rematch. And maybe you caught the Kentucky Derby preview on ABC Friday night last. Guess who was there with Cosell? Why, Ali of course, completely out of his element and totally unnecessary. But that's show-biz.

And it's boxing, much of it a mere charade. And all that goes before the Ali-Foreman rematch will be more of the same — meaningless and without risk, but everyone will buy it.

Phaintin' Phil simply was ahead of his time.

Now an item from the Weyburn Review, concerning, you guessed it — that 1925 Stanley Cup victory by the Victoria Cougars. Mrs. Ethel Hart was the special guest at the Red Wing hockey club banquet, presented the Hart Trophy to the most improved player, Doug Stephenson of Gull Lake. Mrs. Hart also displayed the last puck used in the Cup series when her husband, Gizzie, played for the Cougars. She mentions that she hears occasionally from Clem Loughlin, and that Wally Elmer is another of the old Cougars who "is still with us." Gizzie died 11 years ago, and Mrs. Hart would like to hear from any others who were associated with the club. Mrs. Hart curls with the Weyburn senior ladies and is raising a good strain of quarter horses. Her address is Box 11, Yellow Grass, Saskatchewan.

Blazers Moving Again; This Time to Calgary

The troubled Vancouver Blazers' franchise is on the move again.

After earlier stops in Miami and Philadelphia, the World Hockey Association Blazers will set up shop in Calgary and will be known as the Cowboys.

The announcement of the transfer came this morning simultaneously in both cities.

The latest move involves at least three parties, the Blazers' ownership, the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede Board, and Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Scotty Munro, owner-manager of the Cents, has been named vice-president of hockey operations for the Blazers with general manager Joe Crozier working under him.

Munro, involved when Calgary was considered one of the founding probable members of the WHA three years ago, said the move "is a complicated judgment.

Blazers failed to make ends meet the last two seasons in the 15,570-seat Pacific Coliseum which they shared with Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

In Calgary, the Cowboys will play at the Corral, which seats 5,780 fans.

Officials of the Stampede board and the Cowboys will begin working immediately towards enlargement of the Corral, last used for professional hockey when Calgary Stampeders were members of the Western Hockey League in the early 1960s.

Owner Jim Pattison, who remains as chairman of the team, said a board of directors will be named, including several Calgarians. He specified the president of the club will be from Calgary.

One concern involved is the fate of the Cents.

"There is room for both franchises," said Munro. "This (Calgary) is a great hockey city."

Winnipeg and Edmonton have teams in both the WHA and the WCHL and the junior franchises have suffered heavy financial setbacks. The Cents drew large crowds last season despite finishing a dismal last in the Western Division of the WCHL.

There is speculation the Centennials will move to Vancouver to fill playing dates at Pacific Coliseum vacated by the transfer of the Blazers.

A move by the Cents, however, would have to unanimously approved by WCHL governors. And with a 60-mile territorial limit in the league, the Cents would probably have to give some kind of compensation to New Westminster Bruins and Victoria Cougars.

LaGrone Retires

EDMONTON (CP) — Veteran all-star lineman John LaGrone of Edmonton Eskimos has retired, the Western Football Conference club announced today.

In an eight-year career, LaGrone, 30, was named to the western all-star team six times and to the Canadian all-star team three times as a defensive tackle.

A graduate of Southern Methodist University where he was named to the coaches' All-America team in 1966, LaGrone plans to practice law at his home in Borger, Tex.

He was injured during the 1974 season and did not play in the Grey Cup game in which Edmonton was defeated by Montreal Alouettes.

In his rookie season, he won the DeMarco-Beckett trophy as the outstanding lineman in the Western Conference.

GROVER SPARKLES IN NETS AS ROCKS BOUNCE BURRARDS

VANCOUVER — Victoria Shamrocks opened their Western Lacrosse association season in winning style Tuesday night against Vancouver Burrards.

Displaying a tough defence, the Shamrocks took a 10-5 decision over the Burrards before only 134 fans.

The Vancouver scoring total was the club's lowest in its six-year history.

Key to the victory was Victoria goalie George Grover, a six-year WLA veteran who blocked 30 shots and shut out the Burrards for 38 minutes at one point.

"This defence is the best I've ever played with," said Grover. "Tonight we really jelled and came up with a super performance."

Shamrocks, who play the Timbermen in Nanaimo Friday, finished the first period with a 2-1 lead but took full command in the second with five unanswered goals.

High-scoring Ron MacNeil, who topped the WLA in goals with 54 last season, led the Victoria attack with three tallies, including two on third-period breakaways, and two assists.

Pete Rushton chipped in a pair of goals for the Shamrocks and rookie Jeevan Dillon scored his first WLA goal while the Irish were shorthanded in the first period.

Other Victoria markers came from Mike Beaulac, Nirmal Dillon, Bob Turkington and Jim Browne.

Aeros Throw Blanket On Speedy Nordiques

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston coach Bill Dineen says positional play is the only way to stop Quebec Nordiques and his defending champion Aeros are doing a good job of it.

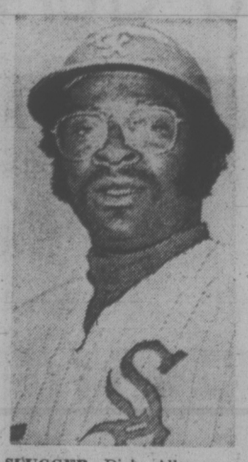
The Aeros' disciplined style of checking helped earn them a 5-3 victory over the Nordiques Tuesday night and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven World Hockey Association final playoff series.

The speedy Nordiques were ready to play after a slow start in last Saturday's 6-2 loss and matched the Aeros goal-for-goal until Houston broke away in a rapid-fire third period, when three goals were scored in 58 seconds.

The score was 2-2 going into the final period. Houston's Gordon Labossiere scored at 2:06, but Quebec came back 17 seconds later with a goal by Marc Tardif, his second of the game.

Then at 3:04, rookie Terry Ruskowski, who reinjured his hand in a second-period fight, poked in the go-ahead goal for the Aeros and Andre Hinse made it 5-3 with his fifth playoff goal at 11:08.

Gordie Howe kept the Aeros even with the Nordiques with goals in the first and second periods. Dale Hoganson scored for Quebec in the first period and Tardif's first goal in the second period.



SLUGGER Dick Allen was traded by Atlanta Braves with catcher Johnny Oates Wednesday to Philadelphia Phillies for minor leaguers Barry Bonnell, Jim Essian, another minor leaguer, to be named after baseball season, and cash. Allen refused to report to Braves after being traded last year by Chicago White Sox and has not played this season.

Twins Run Wild Against Flyers

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Thunder Bay Twins evened their best-of-seven Allan Cup final against Barrie Flyers at two games each Tuesday night with a runaway 8-2 win before 4,196 fans.

The Twins grabbed a big 4-0 lead after the first period and never looked back. They were ahead 5-1 after two periods and the sagging Flyers were unable to muster any kind of an attack in the final frame.

The fifth game in the series will be played Friday with others if necessary on Saturday and Sunday. All remaining games will be played here.

The Twins' scoring was shared by Russ Elliott, Dave Bragnalo, Jack Byerley, Murray Wing, Bill McDonald, Barry Hogan, Tom Deacon and Brian Vescio. Ron Robinson and Corb Adams replied for Barrie.

Barrie playing coach Darryl Sly was in action following a court injunction permitting him to play. Sly earlier had been suspended for refusing to continue a game in the eastern final against St. John's Capitals.

The Flyers will be hard pressed to come back in the series judging by the home-ice record of the Twins. In 37 games Twins have played this year they have lost just two and tied one.

Warriors Nip Bulls

OAKLAND (AP) — Golden State Warriors stormed back from a seemingly ruinuous first period Tuesday night and beat Chicago Bulls 111-106 to even their National Basketball Association Western Conference final at two games each.

The Warriors trailed by 19 points early in the second quarter, but cut the Bulls' lead to two points—52-50—at halftime.

Rick Barry scored 26 of his 36 points in the second half when the Pacific Division champions roared past the foul-plagued Bulls.

Chicago, Midwest Division champions, were ahead 84-82 after three quarters. The Warriors tied the score three times before going ahead to stay 90-88 on a layup by Derek Dickey with 9:47 left in the game. Dickey had six points in the last quarter, when Barry scored 12.

The Bulls' Bob Love, who sat out most of the third period after drawing his fifth personal foul, scored nine of his team's points in the last quarter.

Love led Chicago scorers with 27 points, and Jerry Sloan followed with 22.

Dickey, a reserve forward, scored 14 for the Warriors while guard Charles Johnson finished with 13 points, including five near the end of the game.

The best-of-seven series resumes here Thursday night.

LINESMEN TO WEAR HELMETS

KITCHENER, Ont (CP) — The linesmen at tonight's Memorial Cup hockey game between Toronto Marlboros and New Westminster Bruins have been ordered to wear helmets by Hugh McLean, referee-in-chief of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA).

McLean, of London, Ont., said Tuesday that he told linesmen before Monday's game between New Westminster and Sherbrooke Beavers to wear helmets because of the many fights they might have to break up.

Monday's game produced 102 penalty minutes and the linesme broke up seven fights.

Guelph Victory Marred by Brawl

EDMONTON (CP) — Guelph Biltmores grabbed a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Centennial Cup hockey final Tuesday night with a 4-1 win over Spruce Grove Mets in a game marred by a third-period brawl.

Captain Wally Hogg led the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League champions with an impressive two-way performance.

Hogg scored two goals, one of them while Guelph was shorthanded, and led the often-penalized Biltmores in blocking shots in their own end.

Tim Holder and Dave Kennedy completed the Guelph scoring, while Barry Brown, the rookie winger who scored three goals in Monday's Spruce Grove victory, got the lone Met goal.

The third-period brawl broke out with only 47 seconds remaining in the contest when Spruce Grove forward Tony Lecuyer tangled with Guelph goaltender Bob Mears.

The brawl quickly spread to the other players on the ice. When it was over Lecuyer, along with Hogg, Mears, Doug Bisson and Terry Gregory of Guelph were given majors and game misconducts. Dave Hoyda of the Mets drew two majors and a game misconduct.

Prevention Is Preferable When It Comes to Ticks

It's tick time again on Vancouver Island.

Each year, for three weeks after the last trace of snow disappears, you are likely to be grabbed by one of those little beauties while walking in the woods.

Dogs, in particular, seem susceptible to tick infestations and a friend of mine recently had the grim task of picking no less than 32 off his black lab.

Contrary to popular opinion, ticks do not leap out of the trees but are picked up by their hosts — humans, cats, dogs and deer—when they happen to brust against the grass or vegetation on which the tick is sitting.

If you do happen to get bitten, there's a scant measure of consolation in knowing only three of the 20 species of ticks in British Columbia normally bite humans.

And, on the Island, we don't have to worry about getting a form of paralysis which affects those in the dry belt and southern portions of the province bitten by the Rocky Mountain wood tick.

The bite of the Pacific Coast tick, however, can be painful and even after treatment with an antiseptic can develop into a slow-healing ulcer.

Because of the long-barbed mouth parts, ticks are very difficult to extract once they've taken hold in the flesh. Time-proven methods of persuading the tick to vacate include applying (separately, of course) such irritants as turpentine, gasoline or lighted cigarettes to their hind ends.

If this method fails, simply try pulling it out with a twisting motion. And, it doesn't really matter which way you twist the beast.

Any mouth parts which break off in the wound should be removed before applying an antiseptic to minimize the risk of infection.

But perhaps the easiest method of approach is to use that proverbial "ounce of prevention."

After every outing for the next little while, make it a practice to examine yourself for ticks, paying particular attention to the public area, the base of the skull and the head.

While you're about it, keep a close watch on your pets.

SCHOOL SPORTS
jim crerar

If you ever want to establish a beach-head, evacuate a city or organize a break from Sing Sing, Ron Bowker is your man.

It's All-Schools Relays week, which means Bowker and his army of track and field officials are up to their ears in eager athletes. In terms of logistics, the Normandy invasion pales in comparison.

The relays are open to all area schools, elementary to senior high. They started Tuesday and continue through Thursday, starting at 5:15 and ending about 8:30 each evening at Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

In 10 hours of competition this week, approximately 2,000 youngsters from 52 schools will run through nearly 100 elimination events and 43 finals. It works out to roughly one race every 4½ minutes.

"Basically, we work on a five-minute schedule for finals," explained Bowker, track coach at Esquimalt High and Esquimalt Athletic Club and who started the All-School Relays seven years ago up at Centennial Stadium. They moved to Esquimalt two years ago.

"During the preliminaries," he added, "we might have 20 minutes to run off six heats."

Bowker seems to thrive on it.

"Putting 2,000 kids through their tricks is, well, let's say it's a lot of fun, especially when some are seeing a track meet for the first time," he said.

"But we have a number of experienced officials in Greater Victoria and this is very helpful. They know how to keep the meet running on time. We get good co-operation from the coaches, too."

If you've ever run in an organized race, you know that punctuality hinges on one person — the starter. A good starter can save a bad meet and an inexperienced starter can ruin a good one.

The job seems simple enough, the prerequisite being the ability to shout, "On your marks . . . get set . . ." and pull the trigger.

But there's more to it when you consider each runner in the starting block is trying to anticipate the gun. Getting the jump on the starter and the rest of the field — sometimes referred to as taking a flyer — is a very fine art indeed.

He who hesitates is lost, as the saying goes, and it applies to the starter as much as the runners. If the man with the gunis too slow on the trigger finger, the runners will false-start him to death. It would be less painful for everyone if he simply reloaded with live ammunition and pointed the pistol at his head.

The man under the gun at the All-School Relays is Ernie Teagle and nobody has had to shoot him. He's been doing an excellent job for several years at meets in the Victoria area. You can be sure that Quick-Draw Ernie won't give the young runners in his charge time to louse up his starts.

Preparation for the relays took several weeks and the municipal employees' strike created an extra job for Bowker and his helpers from Esquimalt AC. They had to cut the grass.

"The infield grass is fairly long," Bowker said, "but we've cut it around the high jump area and the area for the softball throw."

Some mowing also had to be done Monday night on the cross-country loop before the course could be marked out with a chalk line.

The grass is cut, the chalk lines are down and they're off and running. By Thursday night Bowker and his buddies can put their feet up and relax.

Not for long, though. The Victoria and district high school preliminaries start next Monday.

Kym and Tanya Lead Milne Win

Defending-champion Edward Milne edged Spectrum Community School 1-0 Tuesday at Spectrum for its third consecutive win in the Senior Girls' High School Soccer League.

Kym Elder scored the lone goal when she converted a rebound midway through the first half. Goaltender Tanya Hurst earned the shutout for Edward Milne, a 5-1 winner over Esquimalt last Thursday.

A scheduled match between Belmont and Esquimalt was postponed until May 27 because of the All-Schools Relays being held at Esquimalt.

JUCKES SEEKING AID FROM BUNNY

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, has sent a letter to the International Ice Hockey Federation asking the IIHF not to allow North American professional teams which do not have an agreement with the CAHA to play exhibition games in Europe.

The letter, dated May 5 and addressed to IIHF president Bunny Ahearne, asked the federation to support the CAHA by withholding permission "until such time as the North American professional organizations have established a suitable relationship with your IIHF North American members.

The National Hockey League's agreement with the CAHA for payment of development fees for drafted junior players expired at the end of the season. The World Hockey Association has stated if does not intend to sign a pro-am agreement with the CAHA for development fees.

Campbell Calls Plan An 'Unfriendly Act'

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League reacted vehemently Tuesday to a proposal that the professional leagues face intervention by the federal government if they fail to reach agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association a compensation for junior players who turn professional.

Roland Mercier, vice-president and junior hockey chairman of the CAHA, made the proposal while attending the national junior championship—the Memorial Cup—in Kitchener.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said he had written a letter to Gordon Juckes, executive-director of the CAHA, to protest Mercier's proposal and to determine whether the statements reflected the views of the CAHA or the personal feelings of the official.

"We consider it a very unfriendly act," Campbell said. "In effect they would be putting us in the same position with anyone else who hasn't responded to their brandishments."

Mercier said his suggestion stemmed from the fact neither the NHL notr the rival World Hockey Association has renewed its pro-amateur agreement with the CAHA. The agreement, under which the CAHA received payment for each junior player drafted, expired last month.

The NHL has expressed itw willingness to renew the agreement provided the rival WHA does the same. But so far the WHA has balked.

The WHA has already stated it would not enter a new pro-am agreement under the current set up, but would prefer dealing directly with individual players. It currently owes the CAHA $195,000, while the NHL has paid for all players it obtained in last year's amateur draft

Mercier said his proposal, which would in effect ask the federal government to tax the leagues for playing in Canada, would be used only as a "last resort."

He said he had submitted his proposal to Robert Giroux, deputy health minister, at a meeting in Toronto last Monday. Mercier said the CAHA could charge a team $100,000 for an annual permit to play on Canadian Ice.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs persuaded Willie Lanier to come out of retirement and signed their standout middle linebacker to a three-year NFL contract.

Paul Wiggin, who was hired to replace Hank Stram as head coach at the end of the 1974 season, said he had accomplished his first objective by getting Lanier back.

"When it comes to service we think a bank should do more than just give or take your money."

Reap some benefits from all the cheques you write.

If you write ten or more cheques a month, consider a Commerce Key Account.

Because at 16¢ each, ten cheques already cost you $1.60. That's for the cheques you write, period.

But an extra 90¢ makes it a whole different story.

With a Commerce Key Account you can get a preferred rate on most consumer loans, (and that's a nice thing to remember). You can get this summer's travellers' cheques for no extra service charge.

You'll have an identification card which allows you to cash a personal cheque, up to $100, at any of our 1600 Commerce branches in Canada.

And that's not all. There is no service charge when you use 24-Hour Cash Dispensers, you'll get special cheques, money orders, domestic drafts, and a whole raft of other services.

All for a flat $2.50 a month. Or, in your case, maybe 90¢ more than you are paying now for cheques alone.

But hold on. We don't think everybody should get a Commerce Key Account. If you're not writing ten or more cheques you could be wasting your money.

And that's exactly what a Commerce Key Account doesn't want you to do.

Think about retiring by the time you're 25.

Sure, at one time or another we've all thought about it. And dismissed it.

But the fact remains, the time to start thinking about your retirement is really the day you start work.

Let us show you why.

If you started saving $50 per month ($600 per year) in the Commerce SMART registered savings plan at age 25, and your investment earned 7% net interest, compounded semi-annually, your retirement savings would amount to $127,614.23 at age 65.

If, however, you waited until age 45 and contributed $100 per month ($1,200 per year) at the same 7% net interest, compounded semi-annually, your savings would only total $51,465.03 even though you've contributed exactly the same amount ($24,000).

So you see, the longer you save your money in a Commerce SMART plan, the more it grows.

But, you say, you want some results while you're young.

As good as done! You can deduct your SMART savings from your taxable income.

Go talk to your local Commerce manager about the advantages of SMART. And ask him for some other money saving ideas too.

If he can tell you something about retiring, he can also tell you something about making more of your money right now without cramping your present-day style.

How to save money at our expense.

Money makes money. It's a simple fail-safe idea.

Put it into one of the many Commerce savings accounts, and you'll always collect the benefit of interest.

The question is, are you collecting the maximum interest?

The person who can answer that, is one of our over 1600 Commerce managers. Because it depends on your particular requirements.

Take a for instance. A Chequing Savings Account only earns you 3%, calculated on the minimum half-yearly balance. So the idea is to keep your balance low there, and take some of your surplus funds and put them somewhere else.

Maybe into a Savings Account where they'll collect 6½%, calculated on the minimum monthly balance. Or perhaps a Term Deposit. Or Growth Savings Certificates. Maybe even a Commerce SMART registered savings plan so you can also benefit from the income tax deduction.

We think now is the time to make the most of the money you have. At our expense.

So talk to your local Commerce manager. We don't think there's anybody in the world with so much money he doesn't know what to do with it.

But if there is, send him to the Commerce.

How to approach a loan these days.

For a loan, as with anything else, it pays to shop around.

Rates do vary from place to place.

At the Commerce, though our rates are already competitive, we can even go one better. If you have a Commerce Key Account you get preferred rates on most consumer loans.

The fact remains, however, a loan costs money. And you have to repay it.

That's why we'd like to sit down and talk about it with you.

It's part of making sure you don't get in over your head just because you need the money.

If you need the loan for a car, we want to make sure your repayment plan still leaves you money to run it.

Talk to one of our over 1600 Commerce managers about the facts behind a Commerce Bankplan loan.

The more you know about the in's and out's of money, the better you can make use of the money you have.

And that's certainly worth talking about.

IT'S YOUR MONEY. MAKE THE MOST OF IT.

Young Hurler Ahead of Koufax

By The Associated Press

He is a young left-hander just breaking into the National League. He went to Lafayette high school in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But there end the similarities between Pete Falcone of the San Francisco Giants and Sandy Koufax, the former great pitcher.

The 21-year-old Falcone made his fifth major-league start in his team's 25th game Tuesday night. Koufax didn't appear in his first game until the end of June, 20 summers ago, and didn't start until July 6.

A 19-year-old Koufax pitched a total of 42 innings his first season, while Falcone already has worked 37. The last eight of those innings were spent beating Atlanta, 7-1, holding the Braves hitless for the first six innings and losing his shutout on an eighth-inning balk.

In Tuesday's other National League baseball action, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston Astros 3-1, Montreal Expos defeated Chicago Cubs 9-4, Cincinnati Reds beat San Diego Padres 7-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates edged New York Mets 2-1 in eight innings. The Philadelphia-St. Louis game was rained out.

Los Angeles pitcher Don Sutton carried a one-hitter into the eighth inning but lost that on two leadoff hits. His second consecutive shutout and 23 consecutive scoreless innings rode away on Bob Watson's ninth-inning home run.

Steve Garvey hit a two-run single and Ron Cey hit his seventh home run to back Sutton's four-hitter, his 15th victory in 16 decisions and the Dodgers' 10th triumph in 12 games.

Montreal's Mike Jorgensen has two career grand-slam home runs. Rick Reuschel has watched both of them from the pitcher's mound. The first was Sept. 6, 1973.

The fourth-inning hit over the right-field fence at Jarry Park gave the Expos and Steve Rogers an 8-0 lead.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose says he still isn't comfortable playing third base instead of left field, but he's doing fine at the plate, including four hits in five at-bats to lead a 14-hit Cincinnati attack.

Pittsburgh catcher Manny Sanguillen hit two run-scoring doubles before the clouds opened up on Shea Stadium. The safeties gave pitcher Ken Brett all the runs he needed to beat the Mets' Tom Seaver.

Brewer String Broken

By The Associated Press

Joe Coleman thought he threw a good pitch. Nelson Briles knew he threw a bad pitch. Both pitches came down between a fence as two-run homers but Coleman and Briles came up with victories anyway.

Detroit Tigers' Coleman was tagged for a two-run homer by Milwaukee's George Scott in the first inning but that was the only hit he allowed as the Tigers rallied to end the Brewers' five-game winning streak 4-2.

Kansas City Royals' Briles blanked Texas on four hits until Willie Davis tied the game with a two-run homer in the eighth. But the Royals retaliated with four runs in the bottom of the eighth and beat the Rangers 6-2.

In other American League baseball action, Boston Red Sox defeated Cleveland Indians 4-1, Oakland A's beat California Angels 5-3 and Minnesota Twins defeated Chicago White Sox 4-1. The New York-Baltimore game was washed out.

Coleman spun his one-hitter although he hadn't pitched in more than a week.

Scott's first-inning homer following a hit batsman gave Milwaukee a 2-0 lead.

Bill Freehan's fourth-inning homer off Pete Broberg started the Detroit scoring. Ron LeFlore put the Tigers in front with a bases-loaded two-run single in the fifth and scored the final run in the seventh when he walked, stole second and came home on a single by Gary Sutherland.

George Brett delivered a tie-breaking single and Frank White added a two-run hit in Kansas City's four-run eighth. After the Rangers tied the score on Davis' two-run homer, Jim Bibby issued a leadoff walk to John Mayberry in the bottom of the eighth and Hal McRae singled him to second.

JOE COLEMAN
. . . one-hit winner

Reliever Steve Foucault fanned Harmon Killebrew but Brett snapped the tie with a single and the runners wound up on second and third on the throw to the plate. White followed with a two-run single, took second on the throw home and scored on a single by Buck Martinez.

Bill Lee's six-hit pitching and Bob Montgomery's two-run single led Boston to its fourth consecutive win.

Sal Bando doubled home the winning run for Oakland in the seventh inning after Claudell Washington tied the score with a leadoff homer.

Steve Brye hit his first home run of the season and Larry Hisle added a run-scoring triple to help the Twins to their fourth consecutive win. The defeat was the sixth for Chicago's Wilbur Wood, who has won only once.

NFL Clubs Finish Deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Denver Broncos traded National Football League rights to wide-receiver Otto Stowe and an undisclosed 1977 draft choice to Los Angeles Rams Tuesday as compensation for signing free agent defensive lineman Phil Olsen.

The teams originally announced the deal as a trade, but later said the NFL had told the clubs it could not actually trade the players since both had played out their options and were free agents.

NAMED ALL-AMERICAN

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Paul Sanberg of Lakehead University of Thunder Bay, Ont., is one of 12 players named to the all-American hockey team announced by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, a national group of United Sates small colleges.

PATS' GOALIE TAKES AWARD

ED STANIOWSKI

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Goaltender Ed Staniowski of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League has been named top Canadian major junior hockey player of the year.

Staniowski was picked for the award in a poll of hockey writers and broadcasters across the country.

The 19-year-old goaltender was on the ice for 3,878 minutes in 65 games this year, picking up two shutouts and four assists while recording a 29-31-5 record.

The two other nominees for the award were goaltender Norman Lapointe of Trois-Rivieres Draveurs of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and centre Doug Jarvis of Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior series.

The selection, based on the player's proficiency, gentlemanly conduct and his participation, activities other than hockey, was announced at the Memorial Cup dinner Tuesday night.

Miss Marshall struck out four batters and walked two as CFB Esquimalt Combos cruised to a 26-0 triumph over MacDonald's Furniture.

The victory elevated the Combos into a three-way Deadlock for first place with Stockers North Americans and CJVI Vicettes.

Ingraham Hotel evened its record at 1-1 Tuesday with a 20-7 decision over Seaboard Construction.

Seaboard Construction rallied in the fifth inning Tuesday to drop Ingraham Hotel 2-1 at Central Park and climb into a first-place deadlock with Port Angeles Telecable in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Seaboard catcher Wayne King, who hit three of seven singles off losing pitcher Mel Nelson, started the rally with a leadoff hit. Phil Berry, who hurled a three-hitter for the victory, then gained base on a fielder's choice which put King out at second and later scored on an outfield error after Vern Benn singled.

With the score then tied 1-1, Benn scored what proved to be the winning run on John Martin's single.

Alton Krantz, an outstanding outfield prospect prior to pulling some ankle ligaments in pre-season play has recovered at home in Prince George, and should be back with the team Saturday.

Bate, in last place in the four-team league, will face Vikings at 7 and 9 p.m. Saturday as well as 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday.

PRO LACROSSE ATTENDANCE UP

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Lacrosse League said Tuesday that attendance for the first 20 games of its 1975 season was up 39.6 per cent over the same number of games last year.

Commissioner Gerry Patterson said attendance averaged 7201 per game for a total of 144,038 throughout the six-team league comprising Boston Bolts, Long Island Tomahawks, Maryland Arrows, Montreal Quebecois, Philadelphia Wings and Quebec Caribous.

Per-game attendance was 2037 more than at the same stage of the league's first season of play last year.

"This increase is particularly encouraging in light of the fact that we are competing directly with basketball and hockey playoffs and with the commencement of the baseball season," Patterson said.

"We are well on our way to our goal of an attendance throughout the league of over one million fans."

Biblical Stories Told In Multi-Media Show

An experiment in retelling basic biblical narratives in a modern multi-media style as a musical show will come to the McPherson Playhouse for one night Saturday.

The presentation of Could We Start Again Please? is by the Co-Val Choristers of Courtenay, who previously brought a production of Sound of Music to the McPherson.

Director is Beryl Regier, who describes the production as "something really different. We combine chorus, film, dance, narration and dramatic scenes to tell the story of the Creation and parts of the life of Jesus Christ," she says.

The Creation is the first of three parts. It is based on poems of James Weldon Johnston and on a Fred Waring arrangement of music by Roy Ringwald.

A short musical, The Diary of Adam and Eve, makes up the middle section. It's a skit based on Mark Twain's version of the story.

The final section, entitled Christ on Trial, is adapted from a novel of the same name. It is comprised of a dramatized courtroom scene set in the present time with flashbacks to the life of Christ.

For the musical part of the show, its creators have called on the scores of Jesus Christ Superstar, Godspell and The Crucifixion by Stainer.

Co-Val Choristers have performed the piece successfully at the Courtenay Civic Theatre and offer it as family entertainment.

Balkan Dances By Troupe

A troupe of 24 young Victoria women — The Seabird Dancers —will present a program of Balkan and Middle Eastern dances Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. at Open Space, 510 Fort.

Formed in 1972 by local dance instructor Karia Leschke, the troupe has grown both in size and skill. This weekend's program will be their major performance of the year.

Seabird Dancers' repetoire includes dances from Yugoslavia, Turkey, Bulgaria, Rumania, Armonia and Israel. The trouple also possesses a large collection of authentic Bulgarian and Croatian costumes.

School 'Ideal Place'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The public school system would be the ideal place for a preventive mental health program, Ron McLintoch, director of the Knowles School for Boys in Winnipeg said Tuesday.

Speaking to the Manitoba Association for Children with Emotional Disorders, McLintoch said schools touch the lives of every family and could thus be ideal bases for mental health workers to work with both students and their families.

As well, he said, the workers would be in a better position to detect emotional problems early, before they have become ingrained. This, he said, could help prevent lengthy, and costly, treatment programs.

NURSE'S AIDE GUILTY IN HOSPITAL MURDER

Times News Services

PETERBURG, Va. — Lee Roy Hargrave Jr., 21, a hospital nurse's aide charged with murdering six elderly patients in his care, was convicted Tuesday night of first-degree murder in one of the deaths and sentenced to life in prison.

Hargrave took an overdose of amphetamines shortly after the sentencing.

He was taken to hospital after lapsing into unconsciousness at the Peterburg courthouse about an hour after a circuit court jury found him guilty.

Defence lawyer John Baker said Hargrave asked for a drink of water and emerged from a lavatory at the courthouse with a cup in his hand. He later fell unconscious.

It was not known where Hargrave got the tablets.

The jury of nine men and three women deliberated one hour and 53 minutes before returning their verdict to a crowded courtroom.

Sentencing came after dramatic testimony from two Peterburg General Hospital patients who said they received injections from Hargrave, lost consciousness and lived to tell about it.

Richard L. Byrd, a husky 43-year-old Hopewell resident, and Edda Jones, a 52-year old nurse's aide, contradicted Hargrave's assertions that he had never violated hospital instructions against giving patients medication.

Both patients told of lying at night in the cornary care unit of Petersburg General Hospital last June and having Hargrave approach them and put a towel over their heads obscuring their vision.

Byrd, however, said he saw Hargrave "with a needle . . . sticking it into a tube" of an intravenous feeding apparatus inserted in Byrd's hand. The patient woke up hours later in the intensive care ward.

Miss Jones said she felt "pressure and a sting" on the hand holding her intravenous feeding tube and shortly afterward lost consciousness.

Pentagon Budget Slashed

WASHINGTON (WP) The House Armed Services Committee Tuesday voted a record $3.7 billion cut in the U.S. Defence Department's $29.8 billion request for new weapons, but Pentagon critics on the committee labeled much of the reduction as "phony."

Included in the cuts is $1.3 billion that the Pentagon wanted in the next fiscal year for military aid to South Vietnam.

Rep. Les Aspin (Dem-Wis.), one of a handful of members on the traditionally pro-Pentagon panel who frequently challenge defence program, said the Vietnam aid request is now "a moot point and shouldn't be considered as part of the overall cut."

Ford Campaign Kickoff Nears

WASHINGTON (WP) President Ford, strongly declaring his intentions to seek a full term, said Tuesday night that an informal committee will meet to discuss campaign plans "within the next few days."

Ford hinted he would campaign on twin themes of peace and prosperity, declaring that "a continuation of basic policies of the last eight years will be good for America."

Without ever mentioning Richard Nixon, Ford said a Republican administration had ended the war in Vietnam, brought back U.S. prisoners of war and taken the first steps to control nuclear arms. And he predicted that domestic economic conditions would be better late in 1975 and next year than they are now.

"I think we're at the end of the recession," the President said.

Expressing "surprise" that there are continuing doubts about whether he will run in 1976, Ford told his 13th news conference that "there should be no skepticism about my intention."

"I intend to be a candidate," Ford said. "I believe that I have the best opportunity to solidify the Republican party, getting strength from both the right as well as the left within the Republican spectrum and to put on a good campaign against the individual that the Democratic Party nominates."

Ford said that a group headed by onetime Republican party chairman Dean Burch will meet within the next few days to discuss the kickoff of his campaign "in a very informal way."

Vagrants Ask Ford For Refugee Status

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (Reuter) — Thirty Sacramento vagrants, many of them living on the city's sidewalks and under its buildings, asked President Ford Tuesday to give them refugee status.

They said tent cities being prepared at military bases for South Vietnamese refugees "look pretty good to us."

Richard Young, their spokesman, said the men "are not here to condemn the aid being provided Vietnamese refugees."

"We are seeking to be classified as refugees, eligible for temporary housing, medical care and food, at least until work opens up. Sleeping in the weeds or on a floor and eating only a bowl of soup does not make a man fit to work."

ITHACA, N.Y. — Television writer Rod Serling, recovering from a heart attack, is expected to be released in two weeks, according to hospital officials. A resident of nearby Interlaken, Serling achieved fame as creator of the "Twilight Zone" series. He is also noted as a TV producer and frequently performs television commercials.

GIBRALTAR — Actor Sean Connery—the original James Bond—was married here Tuesday to the woman he said two months ago he had married in secret.

His new bride is French divorcee Micheline Roquebrune. They were married by governor's licence at the registry office here.

Connery, who lives in the south of Spain, flew with Micheline from Malaga to Tangier and then crossed by ferry to Gibraltar.

NEW YORK — Martha Mitchell, estranged wife of former attorney-general John Mitchell, says she was "terribly frightened" during former president Richard Nixon's last months in office by the thought he could "activate all those missiles" just by pushing a button.

Mrs. Mitchell appeared Tuesday with Truman Capote and Jimmy Breslin on WCBS-TV's "Pat Collins Show."

"I was terribly frightened because, you know, in the president's oval office a button can be pushed and it will activate all these missiles all around the country . . ." Mrs. Mitchell said at one point. "All you have to do is push a button and everything is oblivion.

WANTED MAN ON WELFARE

CHICAGO (AP) — For 18 months the mailman delivered welfare cheques to Calvin Barron, wanted for murder, while police hunted him without success.

Barron, 39, has stopped receiving his $206 monthly payment now but authorities still can't find him.

"I've had all kinds of cases in my 20 years as a policeman but this one really floored me," said Fred Pennix, now a welfare-fraud investigator. "I never dreamed anything like this would happen, especially when you consider he collected the money under his own name."

Pennix said Tuesday he uncovered the irony in early April as he flipped through a Chicago police department bulletin listing the names of fugitives wanted on murder warrants.

Just a few days before, Pennix found that a Calvin Barron had been receiving welfare general assistance payments against public-aid rules while working as a janitor.

Polished Ballet Shines

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The company which dance authority Walter Terry has called "the best of the big four" non-New York City companies performed in Victoria for the first time Tuesday and left no doubt in anyone's mind as to that status.

The Pennsylvania Ballet shone on the McPherson stage like new-minted silver, sleek with a polished deep sheen in technical accomplishment and interpretive flair.

Without doubt the finest example of classical dance seen here for many years, the company has one more performance at the Mac tonight before moving on to Vancouver. No one who has any real taste for dance should miss it.

Superbly disciplined and technically brilliant, this troupe is proof that mastery in these aspects is the only route to freedom of expression and vitality in communications of ideas.

Choreography is throughout, interesting and effective, full of fresh, imaginative invention without at any time being gimmicky, self-conscious or precious.

For ballet purists and music lovers there is special delight to be found in a company that dances to a fine, well-balanced live orchestra which is superbly conducted by Maurice Kaplow.

The first ballet on the program, however, used a solo cello on stage with eight dancers. This was pure classicism, danced en pointe to the music of J. S. Bach's sixth suite for solo cello.

The elegant choreography which illuminated in sculptural forms and movement, the various moods of the baroque music, was by the company's artistic director Benjamin Harkarvy.

There followed a vivid, high-spirited episode of humor in a graceful lampoon of various sporting postures and actions done to some of Handel's most exuberant music.

But the undoubted highlight, the unforgettable heart of the evening was a ballet choreographed by John Butler to a composition entitled After Eden by Lee Hoiby.

It was superbly danced Tuesday by Alba Calzada and Lawrence Rhodes, two artists who create excitingly even as they interpret; for they explore the full range of the anguish and passion, the isolation and fear of Adam and Eve after the fall.

For these two dancers the music was the source, the choreography a frame for the intensity of their own vision. The result was a sustained mood full of rich emotion.

To follow this with anything was to court anti-climax, and if this stirring evening had a fault it was the conclusion—a light-hearted, rather angular modern work to music of Stravinsky, which though finely done, left a small sense of deflation.

The Pennsylvania Ballet has the reputation of doing excellent work with classic Balanchine ballets and traditionalists among the near-capacity audience were undoubtedly left with a hunger for something in that order.

City Girls To Ottawa

Two Victoria girls will be among 15 British Columbia students at the national school patrol jamboree in Ottawa May 23 and 24.

Marilyn Sing, 11, of Hillcrest elementary school, and Lori Stephens, 12, of Tolmie elementary will join more than 8,000 Canadian patrollers at the jamboree.

The Canadian Automobile Association is sponsoring the event.

The B.C. patrollers will get an official welcome from Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips and a tour of Vancouver May 21 before flying to Ottawa next day.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Bail was refused by Judge Fred Green Tuesday in Victoria provincial court for 40-year-old Francis Joseph Johns, 525 Johnson, charged with breaking and entering and theft April 3 at the Nut House, 718 Yates.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett read Johns' criminal record, which went back 23 years and included 22 convictions for which he received a total of 23 years in prison.

Johns called the hearing a farce "because my parole was automatically suspended with this charge."

Green said this was not necessarily so, and asked Johns to give his views on release. Johns told Green what Birkete alleged was true and he had nothing more to add.

Johns was remanded to Friday to obtain counsel.

Judge Harold Alder sentenced David Edward Bryden, 24, to two years in prison for bringing more than $3,000 in goods and cash into Canada illegally. The sentence is to run concurrent to all other sentences, resulting in only an additional six months.

Bryden had been sentenced by Judge Green on Monday to 11 months followed by two years probation for stealing 229 travellers' cheques with a total cash value of $9,526 from a bank and trust company in March. The 11-month term was added to the seven months Bryden must yet serve for an earlier charge.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, an 18-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large, was sentenced to 21 days in jail, to be served on weekends.

Michael Francis Foster, 1722 Newton, had been sentenced April 25 to three two-day weekends for failing to comply with a probation order. He had served one weekend but failed to show up for the second.

★ ★ ★

David Edward Bryden, 24, address not known, was sentenced to 11 months in jail, to be followed with a two-year probationary period.

He had pleaded guilty March 24 to two charges of theft and two charges of false pretences. The theft counts referred to 229 travellers' cheques taken from a trust company and a bank March 11 and March 18, while the others resulted from cashing five $20 cheques March 18. The travellers' cheques amounted to $9,526.

Bail Denied For Accused In Hold-Up

Judge Fred Green ruled in Victoria provincial court Tuesday that there can be no disoussion of bail for an accused person held in custody on any other matter, such as parole suspension.

As a result, Damon Gregory Horne, 27, of Vancouver, charged as Gordon Norman Comley in connection with a Victoria liquor store holdup, will remain in custody for the time being.

The holdup occurred April 12 when two armed men took $19,000 from two employees of the liquor store at 2955 Tillicum as they were taking a night deposit to a Royal Bank of Canada branch in the same shopping centre.

Comley and Robert Joseph Gelineau, 21, arrested in Vancouver less than a week later, returned to Victoria and was charged with armed robbery. Gelineau was released on $3,000 bail. Comley, under the name Horne, appeared on a parole suspension.

Vancouver lawyer Gordon Hayes, elected trial by a B.C. Supreme Court judge and jury for Gelineau and Comley. Preliminary hearing was set for July 28 and 29.

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

COLA Clause For Gov't

An interim agreement, which gives almost 9,000 provincial government employees a cost of living adjustment clause, has been worked out between the Public Service Commission and the B.C. Government Employees Union.

The employees are members of the licensed marine services, correctional services and administrative support components of the BCGEU.

Under the agreement, those employees will receive a one per cent salary increase for every one per cent rise in the consumer price index in the Vancouver area.

The agreement was negotiated to cover the 9,000 employees until a new master contract is negotiated, probably by early October.

The BCGEU negotiates a master contract covering fringe benefits and working conditions for all of its 35,000 members, but then negotiates separate wage contracts for each of the 13 BCGEU components.

The master contract expires on Sept. 30 and the first negotiating meeting for that contract has been set for May 29.

The union has decided to get the master contract settled first this year before starting on the component bargaining. The contracts of the three components—marine services licensed, correctional services and administrative support—are the only ones that expire before the master contract and the members of the components earlier agreed to postpone their bargaining sessions until after the master contract is settled.

One-Day Sentences For Drugs

Two men were sentenced in county court Tuesday to a nominal one day in jail and terms on probation on drug charges.

Stephen Antoine Ladouceur, 21, pleaded guilty to simple possession of marijuana while William John Scott, 9, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. Both men are formerly of 1219 North Park.

Prosecutor Mike Hutchison said jail would probably not serve a useful purpose for Ladouceur, who spent two months in prison earlier before pleading guilty.

Scott, who had pleaded guilty to a more serious charge, had not spent any time in jail and the B.C. Court of Appeal had said the primary consideration in sentencing should be to deter others. He asked for a jail term to be imposed but it "need not be long" because there was "an obvious lack of need" for Scott himself to be in jail.

Judge Montague Drake said it was "probably worthwhile to take another chance" with Ladouceur and placed him on two years probation.

He said Scott's case does not warrant imprisonment. "I think you have smartened up," he said, placing him on probation for one year.

Psychiatric Examination For Accused

A Victoria man was remanded in custody Tuesday for psychiatric examination after being escorted to county court from Victoria General Hospital emergency section.

Mark Graham Murray, 1750 Chambers, was to be tried Tuesday and today on a charge of possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

He was not present in court when trial was scheduled before Judge E. J. C. Stewart. Prosecutor Mike Hutchison said Murray was in hospital nearby and could come if there was a recess.

Murray appeared in court later assisted by his mother.

Dr. John Stratton told court he examined Murray at 10 a.m. at hospital and "I have reason to believe he may be mentally ill. He is in a state of shock and severe anxiety state."

Judge Stewart ordered the medical remand and the case will come back into court May 21.

Singapore Another Domino?

SINGAPORE — With South Vietnam and Cambodia fallen and Laos beginning to teeter, the rich bustling city-state of Singapore has cast wary eyes to the dominoes immediately to its north.

The worry here is about Thailand, where an unstable government confronts Communist pressures in its north and northeast regions, and about Malaysia, where a Communist insurgency along the Thailand border recently has taken new life.

Singapore is the island city at the southern end of the Malay peninsula, far enough away to be insulated from immediate pressure but close enough to be gravely concerned.

Late last week, Acting Prime Minister (and minister of defence) Goh Keng Swee made a public declaration refuting "the domino theory in its simple form." At the same time, he maintained that "we are likely to have gradual, sometimes almost imperceptible, extension of Communist strength in the political and social as well as military fields."

From the British Commonwealth meeting in Kingston, Jamaica, Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew has termed the new situation "detente minus," meaning "minus real peace and cooperation in third-world countries." In a provocative address, Lee declared that the United States, the Soviet Union and China do not want collision through third-party proxies of the less-developed world.

"We have to go through an anxious, troubled and confused period. It helps if we keep our cool. All of a sudden many of our fixed terms of reference have disappeared or become irrelevant," the Singapore leader said.

One of the most serious immediate worries is the massive supply of American weapons now in Communist hands in Indochina. Lee has said that U.S. M-16s could be bought for $200 in Thailand even before the collapse of Saigon, and predicted that the price may be headed down to $100. The arms are superfluous to present Vietnamese needs but much in demand by insurgents. This may become "a source of incalculable mischief" for Southeast Asia and the rest of the world, according to Lee.

In recent months Singapore has beefed up its fleet of high-speed patrol boats for border surveillance though with little hope that this can be entirely effective against determined smugglers. It has also sent its foreign minister to Peking to receive friendly assurances from the region's major Communist power, and trade mission quasi-relations with Hanoi.

As Singapore leaders see it, the most important counterweight to Communist pressure is internal strength, defined as "social justice" and "work-discipline."

The industrious Chinese of Singapore are known for both attributes, helped along by Premier Lee's strict brand of internal control. The new challenge in the region is expected to provide new justification — if any is needed for stern measures on the local issue.

While Singapore wrestles with variations of the domino theory, a major concern is the perception of the danger by other parts of the world. The ideal situation would be enough outside attention to gain sympathy and perhaps some restraining pressures from great powers — but not enough attention to scare away potential Singapore investors.

The bustling streets and burgeoning skyscrapers of this port city are built on world trade and major investments, with the United States still just ahead of Japan as the number one investor. Confidence is of great importance, and there is fear that the question marks about the region's future could cut into it.

"I don't think it will happen overnight, but an American company considering Southeast Asia might well look at a map and say, well there's Saigon and Singapore, both of them start with an S and both are cities in the region. We haven't seen it yet but this could hurt," said Robert Chen, regional manager of the Bank of America.

Chen acknowledged that some businessmen in Thailand have been affected by growing uncertainty and said investment in Malaysia may be hurt by recently enacted restrictions on private management control of oil companies. The danger to Singapore is still more a potentiality than a reality in his view.

Romaine Lettuce Tops in Taste

TINY BENNETT

By TINY BENNETT

Last week I bought the first heads of romaine lettuce I've seen this year and prepared to enjoy some main salad dishes.

Romaine is called cos lettuce in Britain and this appears to be the original name for this long green variety, since there is evidence it was native to the Greek Island of Kos. But no matter which name is used, it is my opinion romaine beats all other lettuce in taste, flavor and economy.

The first I bought this year was only 37 cents for a clean big head, so crisp and fresh that the only wastage was a little trim off the end of the stalk. I keep them in the fridge wrapped in plastic freezer bags and we eat them from the outer leaves right down to the delicate hearts.

People have some funny ideas on lettuce, including the error that they are a perfect food. In fact there's almost no nutrients and what small amount of minerals are present, are concentrated in the greenest leaves. This makes lettuce a weight-watcher's delight and since it forms a perfect base for main meal salads, protein, vitamins and minerals are supplied by the other ingredients.

If superior flavor was not enough, romaine would still reign supreme on the basis that its unique texture keeps it crisp through repeated tossing and mixing in of other ingredients.

A chef in Tijuana recognized this special characteristic and gave us the great dish that bears his name, the Caesar salad. Poor man, most people believe his salad to have originated in ancient Rome.

However, an even greater main course salad that uses this texture factor, is the justly famed salade Nicoise, from Nice on the French Riviera. I first ate this in Ville France, a little fishing village about five miles east of Nice and it is a fond memory.

It was back in 1950 and my wife and I were living it up on the Riviera on a total budget of $5 a day. Out of that had to come the cost of our room in a lovely little hotel on the beach, but next to the army barracks. The room for both of us was $1.25 a night and while the hotel was then noted for its great food, we couldn't afford to eat there.

We bought raw materials in the Nice farmer's market . . . a delightful experience . . . and breakfasted in our room on fruit, fresh bread and eggs that I boiled over a tiny spirit stove out on the balcony.

Lunch on the beach consisted of country ham, cheese or sardines, salad, glorious fresh bread and fresh fruit. Butter was too expensive, but wine was less than 10 cents a litre, if you took your own bottle to be filled from the great casks of vin ordinaire in a local store. Dinner was our big luxury at a cost of between 35 cents and 45 cents each, from one of the many workman's restaurants in the village.

In those days, certain places had to serve dinner at a fixed price that workingmen and students could afford. It was in one of these places that a bunch of us plonked down 35 cents each for soup, bread, carafe of wine, fresh fruit, cheese and a great bowl of salade Nicoise. And that was some meal, believe me. Tips were included in the price — we asked, before we sat down.

That was my first ever exposure to this great salad and I couldn't have asked for a more enchanting time and place. Our dinner party consisted of young Canadian, American, English and French artists, poets and writers — some of whom are now famous.

Salade Nicoise makes a posh luncheon dish or can form a main course for a very different dinner party a la Francaise with, home-made soup, French bread, wine, with fresh fruit and cheese following the salad as the best-of-all desserts.

Basic ingredients consist of romaine lettuce, tuna, anchovies, hard-cooked eggs, French potatoes, tomatoes and black olives. However, this is only the starting point. One can add thinly sliced mild onion, sliced green peppers, green beans just barely cooked and then drained and chilled and fresh green herbs such as tarragon, chives and chervil.

It is a wide-open recipe but quite simple. Here's how I make mine:

SALADE NICOISE:

Line a big salad bowl with carefully washed and even more carefully dried romaine lettuce leaves torn in half. Into the centre, pile one or two cans of top quality tuna, and surround with about three cans anchovy fillets carefully drained and separated. Lay them out on paper towel first.

Outside of the fish, spread out five or six quartered tomatoes, thinly sliced cooked potatoes, six quarters hard-cooked eggs and any, or all of the above mentioned extra items. Make up a dressing of ¾ cup olive oil, ¼ cup wine vinegar with salt and pepper, pour over the salad and toss lightly. Serve immediately after mixing, so if it is the main course, delay adding dressing and tossing, until the time comes to serve the dish.

There is however a delightful trick to preparing the potatoes that makes this salad really glorious.

SALADE NICOISE, POMMES DE TERRE:

Select even-sized top quality potatoes — or better still, baby new potatoes — scrub them thoroughly and without paring, drop them into boiling, salted water to cover and simmer until they are just tender. Use about two pounds.

When tender in the centres, drain and, if using ordinary potatoes, cool until they can be handled and peeled. New potatoes are used whole if they are really tiny. Cut into razor thin slices and put them into a bowl and while still warm pour over two tablespoons dry white vermouth, or double that quantity of white wine and toss very gently. Make an olive oil and wine vinegar dressing on the base of three parts oil to one part vinegar, pour over the potatoes, toss again and put aside to cool then chill slightly before adding to the salad.

With the dressing added while the potatoes are still warm, a subtle flavor is attained since the warmth allows the dressing to infiltrate the vegetable.

This potato salad, is wonderful with sausages, in which case it is served while still warm. But in salade Nicoise, it is heaven.

Cheese Crust and Topping For Easier Apple Pie

By MARY MOORE

There is something new under the sun. It is new apple pie. The cheese that Canadians like to eat with their apple pie is incorporated into the crust and topping.

The sample I forced myself to save for Maureen to taste is rapidly disappearing as I handwrite these notes.

I think this pie may be a little easier than an ordinary apple pie for amateurs to make.

APPLE CHEESE CRUMBLE PIE

Pastry:
¾ c. grated Cheddar cheese (fairly well packed)
3 tbsp. shortening
¾ c. all-purpose flour
⅜ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. cold water.

Filling:
3 medium large apples pared, cored, sliced
⅜ tsp. cinnamon
¾ c. sugar

Topping:
¾ c. stirred but not sifted all-purpose flour
⅓ c. sugar
¼ c. grated cheese
3 tbsp. cold firm butter.

To make crust in beater bowl cream together the cheese (first amount) and shortening. Add flour and salt and now with a pastry blender cut the creamed mixture into them until it resembles coarse meal. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork. Press into ball. Roll out on lightly floured board to fit shallow 8 inch pie plate and line pie plate and make a high fluted edge.

Combine filling ingredients and tip into lined pie plate and level off.

Mix together all topping ingredients except butter. Cut the hard butter in with pastry blender until size of peas. Tip topping over apples and make it smooth by applying a little pressure all over with your palms.

Bake at 190 deg. C. about 35 minutes or until apples are tender. Put an oven protector under this pie for it may bubble over a little.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents for each specified recipe.

Strawberry Pie With Ladyfingers

(Makes 9-inch pie)

1 package (3-¾ ounces) instant vanilla pudding mix.
1½ cups milk.
9-inch baked pie shell.
4 ladyfingers, split.
1½ tablespoons cream sherry.
1 pint fresh strawberries.
6 tablespoons currant jelly.

Prepare pudding mix according to package directions, using only 1½ cups milk. Pour half of pudding into cooled pie shell; arrange ladyfingers, cut-side up, on pudding and sprinkle with cherry. Spoon remainder of pudding over ladyfingers and spread evenly. Chill about 2 hours. Arrange whole strawberries on top of filling. Melt jelly over low heat, stirring constantly. Spoon jelly over strawberries to glaze. Serve pie immediately or chill until serving time.

GREEK STYLE SPINACH PIE

(Spanakopitta)

3 pounds fresh spinach
¾ cup olive oil, approximately
2 bunches green onions, trimmed and chopped
¼ cup chopped parsley
½ pound feta cheese, crumbled
6 eggs, lightly beaten
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
½ pound or 10 sheets phyllo pastry (see note).

1. Preheat the oven to 177 deg. C.

2. Pick over the spinach to remove and discard all blemished leaves and tough stems. Rinse the spinach in several changes of cold water to remove all traces of sand. Steam the spinach briefly over boiling water just until the leaves are wilted. Let cool. Chop the spinach coarsely.

3. Heat one tablespoon of oil in a skillet and add the green onions. Cook, stirring, until the onions are wilted.

4. In a mixing bowl, combine the spinach, green onions, parsley, cheese, eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Add one tablespoon of oil and blend thoroughly.

5. Select a baking pan measuring approximately 13-by-9 inches. Or use a round pan of similar size. Cover the pan with one layer of phyllo pastry, letting the edges of the pastry hang over the sides. Brush the pastry generously with oil. Continue adding four more layers, brushing each layer with oil as it is added. Spoon the spinach mixture into the centre and smooth it over. Cover with another layer of phyllo, brush with oil and continue adding four more layers, brushing oil between each layer. Use a sharp knife or scissors to trim off the over-hanging edges of pastry. Bake the pie for 40 to 50 minutes or until it is piping hot throughout and golden brown on top.

Yield: Eighteen or more servings.

YEREVAN-STYLE CHICKEN WITH WINE SUBSTITUTE

(Serves 4)

The original recipe did not call for wine — but it is a nice addition. You can substitute white wine for the stock in whole or in part. Use fryers or spring chickens — that is, little chickens — or the meat won't cook all the way through and will be tough. In case you forgot to or couldn't buy pitted prunes, pour boiling water over the prunes and let them soak for 2 or 3 minutes. Then with a small knife make a slit in each prune and remove the pit.

2 onions, chopped fine
2 tablespoons butter
2 2-pound chickens, cut up
1 cup (8 ounces) sour cream
Salt and pepper
1 cup or 8 ounces pitted prunes
1 cup or 6 ounces golden raisins
1 cup chicken stock and-or white wine

Saute chopped onions in 1 tablespoon butter in large frying pan that has a cover. (Cover is not needed yet). When they are lightly browned, remove from pan and put aside in a small dish or bowl.

Brush skin side of each piece of chicken with enough sour cream to coat it lightly.

Add another tablespoon of butter to onion pan and when it has melted, put all chicken part skin-side down in pan.

Salt and pepper naked side of chicken parts and then brush with sour cream, using just enough sour cream to coat the surface lightly. When skin side is golden brown, turn chicken parts over and then when second side is brown . . .

Put sauteed onions over chicken, then prunes and raisins, and finally chicken stock and-or wine.

Cover pan and let simmer for 1-2 hours or until chicken is cooked.

HILDA BEASTALL

The key to enjoyment of simple foods, apart from good company, is without doubt variety from day to day. A system of mixing and matching the various groups of foods not only provides the variety in appearance and flavors, but is some assurance of complete nutrition.

Brown rice, wheat, oat or rye flakes, coupled with one of the legume foods as dried peas, soy, red, lima, or navy beans, makes a good beginning.

Add Cheddar cheese, skim milk powder* or eggs to increase the volume. One authority lists brown rice combined with brewer's yeast as especially "potent" so that if you find some of the other ingredients in the following recipes are missing in your cupboards, substitute a tablespoon of brewer's yeast and the result will be good in flavor and nutrition although different from the original.

Two vegetables, one from the leafy group, one from the root group, and the meal is completely satisfying for most healthy persons.

Large servings are rarely wanted of such meals, for what is surprising when first starting on them is their "staying power". Snacks between meals are rarely looked for or needed, so that the extra time taken in preparation is made up of saving time out taken for snacks.

The saving in food expenses must be considerable but this is difficult to judge without working on conventional comparative meals at today's prices. Personally I find it economical to buy some food items which are normally considered luxuries such as fresh mushrooms, filleted turbot, raw unsalted peanuts and non-instant skim milk powder, for they are used in many meals for their contribution to variety and total nutrition.

As an example for a basic recipe to be varied by using different ingredients, and a variety of vegetable combinations, let us look at a brown rice savory dish.

The first variation possible from this recipe is that it may be partially cooked and then finished in the oven which gives a crisp brown top. But this is economical only if something else is being cooked in the oven at the same time. It may be a couple of pans of muffins or a sheet full of cookies.

If no oven, the same ingredients will be just as good to eat when cooked on top of the stove. A slice of thin toasted wholewheat bread beneath each serving provides crispness.

Savory Rice Supper No. 1

2 cups cooked brown rice
1 small onion chopped OR
½ cup chopped chives
½ cup chopped parsley and, or, chervil
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
½ tsp. salt
1 cup milk from powdered skim
2 eggs, beaten
2 tbsp. soft margarine or soy oil

Mix together in large casserole; cover, and bake in moderate oven at 177 deg. C. for 5 minutes. Uncover, and bake 15 minutes more.

The alternative is to mix all together in a saucepan with low heat, bring gently to almost boiling point. Then set on lowest heat for 15 minutes covered, to set and cook the eggs. Chives are better than onions on this variation. Serve on toast, for 3 or 4.

Savory Rice Supper No. 2

2 tbsp. soft margarine or soy oil
½ cup fresh mushrooms, diced
¼ cup chopped parsley or chervil
2 cups cooked brown rice
1 cup milk from powdered skim
2 eggs beaten
½ tsp. salt
1 cup finely chopped spinach, or kale shoots.

In a covered frypan or electric skillet, melt the margarine or heat the oil. Brown mushrooms in oil for three minutes; add parsley or chervil. Stir with wooden spoon for three minutes.

Add cooked rice and mix. Heat through gently.

Beat eggs into milk, add salt. Pour over rice mixture in pan. Set on low heat.

Chop the spinach, or kale, or any green leaf vegetable.

Spread over surface of pan contents; barely simmer on lowest heat, with cover on, for about 10 minutes.

For further variations of recipe No. 1:

(a) substitute one cup of cooked dried peas and half a cup of soy flour for one of the cups of cooked rice;

(b) add to the recipe three-quarter cup cooked red beans and two tablespoons of wheat flakes. Leave out the eggs then if you wish;

(c) substitute one cup cooked soybeans, one cup of oat flakes and two tablespoons of brewer's yeast for one of the cups of cooked rice;

(d) for the vegetables, substitute heated canned tomatoes and steamed fresh broccoli;

(e) or use frozen broccoli and freshly cooked carrots.

– Brown rice is bought in bulk cheaper than in packages; it keeps well in any dry cupboard.

Wheat and oat flakes come in five pound bags with many helpful recipes on the reverse sides. Rye flakes are sometimes available too. All can be used in other types of cooking — cakes, cookies, soups for thickening, cooked and granola type of breakfast cereals, with meat mixtures for loaves and minces. Not all stores stock these flakes, but some general grocery shelves do; others would if the managers were asked often enough for them.

Since most of us are looking for economy linked with nutrition and enjoyable, variable meals, let us take the time to search out the makings.

Barbecue Sauce

About 3½ cups

2 cups salad oil
2-3 cup vinegar
4 to 5 tablespoons sugar
1-3 cup catsup
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons Worchestershire sauce
Few dashes hot pepper sauce

Combine ingredients and refrigerate in tightly covered container. Will keep for several weeks.

Dilled Swiss Meat Pie

(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

Filling:
1½ pounds lean ground beef
¾ cup finely chopped onion
1 medium clove garlic, crushed
¼ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup dill pickle liquid (drained from dill pickles)
½ cup milk
½ pound processed Swiss cheese, cubed (about 2 cups)
½ cup chopped dill pickles
1 jar (4½ oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
1 egg
1 egg white

Crust:
3 tablespoons dill pickle liquid (drained from dill pickles)
3 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1 egg yolk
2 cups buttermilk baking mix

For filling: In a large skillet combine ground beef, chopped onion and garlic. Cook over medium-high heat until meat is browned, stirring constantly. Drain off fat. Reduce heat to low; stir in flour, salt and mustard. Add ½ cup dill pickle liquid and ½ cup milk. Cook stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Stir in cheese, chopped pickles, drained mushrooms, egg and egg white. Heat until mixture is hot, stirring constantly; keep warm.

For crust: Combine 3 tablespoons dill pickle liquid, 3 tablespoons milk, melted butter and egg yolk. Add to buttermilk baking mix; stir to form a soft dough. Turn dough onto a lightly floured surface; knead 5 times. Divide dough in half. Roll out one dough half into 11-inch circle. Transfer to a 9-inch pie plate; press into bottom and sides of plate. Trim dough leaving a ½-inch overhang. Pour filling into pie shell. Roll out remaining dough half into a 10-inch circle; cut out a 5-inch circle from centre and reserve for decorating pie. Place larger circle of dough over filling in bottom crust. Pinch top and bottom crust together at edges; press edges firmly with tines of fork or flute. From reserved dough, cut out decorative designs; place on pie. Bake in a 375 degrees oven for about 25 to 30 minutes, or until crust is browned and filling is hot.

Instant Cheese Sauce

1½ pounds gruyere cheese, finely grated
¾ cup sour cream
Salt to taste

Mix cheese and sour cream; season to taste with salt. Pack in tightly covered container and refrigerate.

To use, spread mixture on broiled fish run under broiler to melt cheese, or spoon into piping hot split baked potatoes, or mix with hot mashed potatoes, or spread on toasted bread and broil until cheese melts, or spoon over scrambled eggs or into omelette before folding, or spoon over hot vegetables.

This will keep as long as the sour cream keeps. Check the carton for the expiration date.

Iron-Deficiency Anemia Is a Common Occurrence

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Dr. JEAN MAYER
Professor of Nutrition,
Harvard University

Are you pale, wan and listless? Is your blood tired? Then, as the ads proclaim, you may need more iron. And it's true that you may, if your condition is actually diagnosed as a case of iron-deficiency anemia.

Iron deficiency is in no way a rare occurrence, particularly among women of childbearing age.

But there are other forms of anemia that are less prevalent but still not uncommon. These anemias are not caused by lack of iron but by a deficiency of various vitamins, particularly a sufficient shortage of one or both of two B vitamins — folic acid and vitamin B-12.

In general, all of the B vitamins play a vital role in the body's breakdown and utilization of dietary fats, proteins and carbohydrates. But folic acid and B-12, in addition, are required for the synthesis of nucleic acids, particularly the key substance called DNA, the constituent of cell nuclei that determines heredity. For red blood cells to be formed, DNA must be made in parent cells in the bone marrow.

The difference between the form of anemia that results from iron deficiency and those that involve a lack of folic acid or B-12 is not apparent. But a sample of blood placed under a microscope immediately reveals the cause. A deficiency of iron causes fewer and small red blood cells to be made.

By contrast, while a deficiency of folic acid or vitamin B-12 also causes fewer red cells to be produced, many of those that are made are giant and malformed cells.

If folic acid deficiency is the cause, the damage ends there because supplements of folic acid will reverse the process, and correction in dietary habits can cure the anemia permanently. If the cause is a deficiency of vitamin B-12, however, further complications may follow — if the deficiency is prolonged.

Vitamin B-12 is also necessary for the synthesis of myelin, the sheath of tissue that surrounds nerve fibres. And without it, nerve tissue in the brain and spinal cord slowly degenerates until (sometimes after many years) it becomes irreversible. Incidentally, you don't suddenly develop a B-12 deficiency. It generally takes years and years of deprivation.

Dr. Victor Herbert, an authority on vitamin B-12, has observed that damage to the nervous system with anemia is more likely to occur in people who are well off economically, while poorer people tend to have both the anemia and nerve degeneration.

His explanation is that the well-to-do person is more likely to eat fresh fruits and vegetables, which are rich in folic acid. (And which many unfortunately, consider a luxury!) A poorer person is not likely to be able to afford all the B-vitamin-rich fruits and vegetables plus the protein foods that have B-12.

A poor diet, of course, is not the only cause of B-12 or folic acid deficiency. Chronic alcoholism, malabsorption caused by intestinal disorders or surgery, hereditary factors (such as Addisonian pernicious anemia, a disorder of B-12 absorption) and, possibly, oral contraceptives can raise the requirement for one or both of these vitamins. In any of these conditions, a physician should prescribe a treatment.

For most of us, a good diet is the best safeguard. Folic acid, as its name suggests, is especially abundant in leafy vegetables. It is also present in all green vegetables, liver, dried beans, peas and other legumes, nuts, whole wheat and some fruits, such as oranges.

Large amounts of folic acid can be destroyed by heat or exposure to air, so it is best to use fresh foods, raw or lightly cooked, and to store them out of the air in a cool place.

The vitamin B-12 in foods is not affected by cooking temperatures or by air, but is unstable in light and the high temperatures required for processing. Up to 90 per cent can be lost in the process of making evaporated milk.

Only small traces of B-12 are present in plants, so a good, B-12 rich diet must include some animal foods: liver, meat, fish, shellfish, eggs, milk and most milk products (except for butter, yogurt and evaporated milk).

And if you are a vegetarian, remember that milk, cheese or eggs are necessary to avoid a vitamin B-12 deficiency and the slowly progressing nerve deterioration that that implies.

Shelling Out for Eggs

By BRAD SMITH

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — One way to beat inflation while enjoying the fruits of your labors, so the story goes, is to raise your own food.

Home-grown food has its advantages. It's fresher than what the stores sell and can be as natural as you want it — but it isn't always cheaper.

Take, for instance, eggs.

My wife and I, along with two growing boys, love to eat eggs. Possessing a house in an agricultural area and already having met limited success with a vegetable garden, we decided to go into the poultry business.

It seems simple enough — get a chicken, the chicken lays an egg and you eat it. No middleman to boost the prices and to let the eggs sit around the store several weeks. Just fresh, cheap eggs.

We started from scratch. We paid 25 cents each for a dozen assorted day-old chicks — Rhode Island reds, Black minorcas and australorps.

A toolshed in the back of the house was converted into a chicken coop. The only additional equipment needed was chicken wire for a small yard, a watering device and a feeder. Used lumber made a nest and an old cartop carrier became a roost. All that came to about $35.

Then we had to buy food.

Baby chicks, besides being cute and lovable, aren't big eaters. We didn't think we'd have any trouble with that expense until they were old enough to lay eggs.

We discovered it took the chickens — six of which turned out to be hens — between five and eight months to begin laying eggs. By the time they were three months old they were eating a 50-pound bag of feed every three weeks and that cost, at the beginning, $3.75 a bag.

Two of the chicks died within a few weeks. Four roosters were killed for food when they were about six months old.

The six hens left are doing a good job. Even in the winter slack period they provide nearly three dozen eggs a week — ample for us.

On a cost accounting basis, we get nine dozen eggs out of a 50-pound bag of feed. The price of that bag is now $4.75, which means we pay 61 cents for a dozen eggs. That isn't bad for truly fresh extra large eggs.

But it isn't great. The local grocery store price has been fluctuating between 59 cents and 81 cents for a dozen of Grade A eggs.

However, when you add in the money it took to set up the backyard chicken coop in the first place, the chickens will have gray feathers before we recoup our losses.

Potato, Ham Casserole

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 cup (4 ounces) grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper
2 cups diced cooked potatoes
3 cups diced cooked ham
1 cup green beans

Saute onion and green pepper in fat until onion is transparent. Blend in flour. Gradually add milk, stir and cook until thick (about 10 minutes). Add cheese and stir until melted. Season to taste. Combine potatoes, ham and beans in a greased baking dish. Pour sauce over and blend until mixture is well coated. Bake at 350 deg. F. until bubbling (about 30 minutes). 6 servings.

Straw Potatoes

4 large potatoes (about 1½ pounds),
Oil for deep frying,
Salt.

1. Peel the potatoes and drop them into cold water to cover.

2. Cut the potatoes into about one-eighth-inch thick slices with a knife or potato slicer. Stack the slices, a few at a time, and cut the potatoes into shreds about one-eighth inch thick (see note). Drop the shreds into cold water as they are prepared.

3. Drain the potatoes well into a colander.

4. Heat the oil to about 360 degrees in a cooker for deep frying. Add the potatoes, a few handfuls at a time, and cook them, stirring frequently, until they are crisp and golden brown. Drain on absorbent toweling and sprinkle with salt.

Yield: Eight servings.

Note: Specialty shops that deal in imported cooking utensils sometimes carry mandolins, a special French device for slicing and shredding. They have a special cutter for shredding potatoes for straw potatoes.

Travel Club For Non-Smokers

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I wrote asking if you knew of a travel club for nonsmokers. You replied that you did not, but suggested I contact the American Cancer Society. They did not know of any either.

Now there is one! The Nonsmokers' Travel Club, which I was instrumental in forming. We are an off-shoot of GASP (Group Against Smokers' Pollution), and now have 71 members. We are in the Wasington, D.C. area, but have members from all over the U.S.A.

We have two domestic bus trips, and three foreign trips planned for 1975. Our buses will have nonsmoking drivers and nonsmoking tour guides. Our foreign trips will travel in the nonsmoking section of scheduled airliners. Once at our destination, we will travel in our own bus with a nonsmoking driver and guide.

If you think this will be of interest to your readers, please mention it in your widely read column. — Mildred A.Post, Chairperson.

DEAR MILDRED: It's mentioned. Those interested in travelling without the annoyance of tobacco smoke may write to me (and please include a stamped, addressed envelope) for the address of the smoke-free travel club.

DEAR ABBY: This is to INSULTED, who was upset because her daughter-in-law carried her scale around and weighed her food in the kitchen before she ate it.

Lady, get off your high horse. Evidently you've never had to fight a weight problem. I can tell you, it's pure hell!

My husband and I are both weight watchers, and we go to his mother's for dinner, and you can bet we always take our scale with us and we weigh every last ounce that goes into our mouths. His parents both respect and admire us for our determination to lose weight so we will not only look better, but feel better.

Furthermore, you should be glad your daughter-in-law weighs her food in the kitchen. I keep my scale right next to my plate.

If I were your daughter-in-law and had learned that you had written to Dear Abby complaining about my dragging a food scale with me when I ate at your house, you would never find me at your table again unless you apologized! — Insulted.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 years old. Last year I fell in love with a young man who was 20. Our relationship gradually became more serious. We talked of marriage, but made no definite plans.

He was recently killed in an auto accident; it was then that I learned to my great surprise that he had taken out a life insurance policy and made ME the beneficiary. (The amount I am to get is $50,000.)

All the family he had was a mother and two brothers. Some people feel that I should sign the money over to his mother.

I don't think I am being selfish, but I think that since he left it to me, I should have it. Neither his mother nor I is financially handicapped.

Who do you think the money belongs to?

"WAITING"

DEAR WAITING: Since it was left to you, it belongs to you.

Visits Announced

Latin America Now No. 1 Hard Drug Supplier to U.S.

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times

NEW YORK — In the last two years, Latin America has become the major source of hard drugs entering the United States. Much of it is being supplied by rings controlled by businessmen and professionals who have grown so politically and economically powerful that they can operate with virtual immunity from arrest and prosecution.

Latin America now supplies all of the cocaine sold in the United States, where the demand for the drug has risen so sharply that the price of coca leaves, from which cocaine is extracted, has soared 1,500 per cent since 1973 in some Latin countries — from $4 to $60 a bale.

In addition, Mexico has now replaced France as the main supplier of heroin to the United States, increasing its share of the illegal heroin market from 20 to 60 per cent in the last five years.

The increasing market for drugs from Latin America, which is centred in New York, Miami and Los Angeles, is supplied by traffickers who can buy protection by bribing poorly paid police officers, judges and other officials. In some cases, corrupt policemen and public officials in Latin America have gone into the profitable drug traffic themselves.

The shift of the drug flow from Europe to Latin America also has brought into power new criminal networks in New York and other cities in the United States that are dominated by Colombians, Cubans and Mexicans.

The federal Drug Enforcement Administration has identified about 250 Latin Americans as controlling the rings that supply cocaine and heroin to the United States market. Some of them are so influential politically that they are considered "untouchable" in their native countries.

If drug traffickers can't use political influence to stop investigations against them, they can often successfully bribe police officers of judges.

Traffickers have so much available cash, for example, that in Colombia judges sometimes compete to try major narcotics cases because of the potential payoffs involved.

Traffickers often find the police even easier to corrupt than judges because throughout Latin America they are so badly paid. Police salaries range from about $60 a month in Bolivia to $250 a month in Argentina.

Some Latin American policemen who won't take bribes are not averse to arresting drug traffickers and then extorting money from them — a practice called volteo, which means "rolling."

Despite the temptations, many policemen remain honest. "I've met cops making $60 a month who wouldn't take a nickel from anybody," said Louis Bachrach, the Drug Enforcement Administration's regional director for South America.

In recent years cocaine has become the most fashionable drug in the United States and Europe because it is less expensive than heroin, it is not physically addictive and it has a reputation as a sexual stimulant. One indication of the drug's growing popularity is that cocaine seizures in the United States have increased 700 per cent since 1969.

The huge profits to be made by transporting cocaine from Latin America to New York also make it clear why so many are willing to take the risk. In New York City a kilo of cocaine is sold on the street for between $75,000 and $100,000. In Las Paz, Bolivia, that same kilo would cost only $4,000.

While cocaine has been growing in price and popularity, heroin from France — the traditional source — has been declining in availability because of international law-enforcement pressure on French traffickers. This has left a gap that is increasingly being filled by Mexican heroin.

Today the federal authorities estimate that Mexico produces 15 tons of opium base, from which heroin is made, every year. Mexico is now employing soldiers to seek out and destroy fields of opium poppies. But so far the drive has not slowed up poppy cultivation to any noticeable degree. (When one field is destroyed, the campesinos — peasant farmers — plant again elsewhere.) Nor have Mexican authorities succeeded in discouraging the use of the country as a transhipment point for cocaine from South America.

Cocaine is derived from the leaves of the coca plant, which grows at elevations of 2,000 to 8,000 feet on the eastern slopes of the Andes mountains in South America.

Because of the large quantity of leaves required to produce cocaine — more than 300 pounds for one kilo — the leaves are processed by campesinos (peasant farmers) into "coca paste" in primitive stills close to the growing areas. These stills are no more than oil drums containing a solution of potassium carbonate, water and kerosene in which the leaves are allowed to soak.

The paste, which resembles moist flour, is then shipped to laboratories throughout Latin America to be processed into cocaine. Processing cocaine does not require the sophisticated chemistry needed to produce heroin. A cocaine laboratory can be set up with about $1,500 worth of equipment.

Peru and Bolivia are the only two Latin American countries where the cultivation of coca leaves is legal. In Peru, new coca planting has been forbidden since 1964, but production of coca has increased 20 per cent a year. Last year Peru produced 20 million kilograms of coca leaf, only four million of which were used for such legitimate purposes as export for chemical use and for chewing by local Indians.

When the Peruvian government clears jungle land for farming and turns it over to the camperinos, they almost always plant coca on the land. The government winks at this practice, however, because it allows the campesinos, who are mostly Indians, to support themselves without any training or financial support.

Unlike Peru, Bolivia has been trying harder to bring coca production under control.

A year ago Bolivia enacted broad narcotics legislation calling for the control of coca production, stiff prison terms for drug dealers and unified police action against major traffickers. But implementation of the law has been extremely slow and the narcotics unit has made few significant arrests or seizures.

Peru exports most of its coca paste to its northern neighbors, Ecuador and Colombia.

"Tons of paste come up from Peru with little interference and a lot of it moves on up to Colombia," White said. "If we could do something about the borders, we would disrupt the cocaine traffic not only here, but also in Colombia, which sends more of the stuff to the United States than any country in South America.

Federal authorities believe Colombia now has between 60 and 80 major criminal organizations engaged in the cocaine traffic.

The huge profit between New York and Latin America is what makes thousands of men and women willing to take the risks involved in smuggling cocaine into the United States.

The methods they use are imaginative, bizarre and sometimes fatal to the couriers, who have been known to soak their clothes in cocaine or to swallow drugs stuffed in a prophylactic pouch.

Every conceivable container has been used by couriers to secrete drugs coming in from Latin America — false-bottomed wine bottle, frames of paintings, hollow ski poles and even a hollow wooden hanger.

Large quantities of cocaine — over four kilograms — are usually sent by ship or plane. The drugs then may be carried ashore or dropped overboard in harbors to be picked up by scuba divers.

Smaller amounts of cocaine — under four kilos — are carried generally by couriers, who account for the greatest part of the traffic. Many of the couriers come from Colombia.

Latin-American drug traffickers find it isn't difficult to recruit their countrymen as couriers, called "mules," because if they are caught, many judges in the United States will give them only suspended sentences and deport them in the belief that they are not hardened criminals.

Teachers to Keep Militant Attitude

SUSPENSION PLAN

VANCOUVER (CP)— Delegates to the British Columbia School Trustees Association Tuesday approved a motion to allow local boards to discipline teachers by suspending them without pay.

The motion calls for a meeting between the BCSTA and the B.C. Teachers federation to formulate a plan for suspensions, which would be submitted to the department of education.

The public schools act does not allow for suspension of teachers guilty of an offence that doesn't warrant dismissal.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Broadley, president-elect of the B.C. Teachers Federation, said Tuesday, B.C. teachers will remain Militant during his tenure of office.

Broadley is scheduled to take office when Jim McFarlan, whom he described as "dynamic, forceful and militant," steps down July 1.

Broadley told delegates at the annual meeting of the B.C. School Trustees Association that although his "style" is different from McFarlan's, his commitment is no less.

The Trustees Association and the Teachers Federation have frequently found themselves at odds with each other, most recently on the issue of collective bargaining.

The trustees passed a resolution Monday recommending the provincial government implement a system of bargaining by zones, which would virtually compel local school associations to participate.

The resolution was quickly denounced by McFarlan. Broadley told delegates the teachers were not at all pleased with the resolution.

He noted an inconsistency in the Trustees' insistence on local autonomy for school boards and their attempt to erode the local autonomy of teacher's associations.

Vancouver Magazine Healthy, Doomed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Magazine will cease publication with its current issue although the nine-year-old monthly is in good financial shape, publisher Clem McCloskey said Tuesday.

"I think it's the oddest way of closing a magazine I've ever known," he said in an interview. "There was no wolf at the door."

He said the principals of Agency Press, the parent company of Pacific West Publications Ltd. which publishes Vancouver Magazine, decided they didn't want to be publishers.

Agency Press has been divesting itself of magazines it has owned for the last two years. Vancouver Magazine was the last.

McCloskey said a deal to sell the magazine had been negotiated but the financing fell through. It is still for sale.

The magazine had a circulation of 52,000 a month, of which about 5,000 was paid newsstand sales at 50 cents a copy, McCloskey said. The remainder were free copies placed in hotels, sent to selected homes and circulated with a weekly newspaper.

McCloskey said jobs have been found for most of the 11 full-time staff members on the magazine.

Bear Trapping Plan Off?

SMITHERS (CP) — The provincial government is unlikely to go through with a plan to destroy male black bears in two 20-square mile areas near here, a biologist with the fish and wildlife branch said Tuesday.

Dave Hatler, who earlier was quoted as saying he was under orders to kill all male bears in the areas, said the situation is not as extreme as reported.

"I suspect it won't proceed," he said. "I fully expect to get orders to cease and desist."

Most Shotguns Recovered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Tuesday they have recovered all but 13 shotguns missing from a weekend theft of 92 guns worth about $18,000. Joseph Gabyrsiar, 50, and Glen Edward Kay, 53, were scheduled to appear in provincial court today, charged with breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

'Purchasing Power Increased'

TERRACE, (CP) — Wages in B.C. are equal to or substantially exeed increases in the cost of living, William Hamilton, president of the Employers' Council of B.C. said Tuesday.

"During 1974, the purchasing power of workers' gross wages increased marginally despite the ravages of inflation, since in 1974 the annual increase in weekly earnings for British Columbians was an estimated 12.6 per cent, when compared with an increase in the average annual consumer price index of 11.6 per cent," he said.

$900,000 to Retardation Centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Variety Club of Western Canada has committed $900,000 toward construction of the Bob Berwick Memorial Centre for the British Columbia Mental Retardation Institute, Chief Barker Irv Levenson says.

The facility, now under construction at the University of B.C., will replace converted army huts now used for pre-school activities for mentally-handicapped children and for training programs to teach persons who serve the mentally handicapped throughout B.C.

'Inadvertently' Freed from Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Tuesday broadcast a pick-up request for the man "who had been inadvertently released from jail."

Jerome Daniels, 20, appeared in provincial court in adjacent Burnaby Tuesday on an impaired driving charge. He was convicted and fined $300 or 15 days in jail.

But Vancouver police had an outstanding traffic bench warrant for him, so after the disposition of the case in Burnaby, and without paying the fine, he was transferred to the city court.

A Vancouver judge released Daniels on the traffic charge for a $200 recognizance bond and it was on this order that a jail officer processed and released the man.

Unrest Cost Contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — A British Columbia shipbuilding company was chosen over a Quebec firm for a $94-million government contract to build two icebreakers because of labor unrest in Quebec, Jean-Pierre Goyer, minister of supply and services, said Tuesday.

Goyer said in an interview that the government chose Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver over the Davie Shipbuilding Co. of Lauzon, Que. because Burrard could guarantee to do the work within a fixed price while the Davie company could not.

Both companies submitted competitive bids for construction of the maritime patrol vessels which will be used in eastern and Arctic coastal waters, Goyer said.

But the Davie company "just couldn't guarantee their productivity."

The contract went to Burrard because the firm accepted a "target incentive ceiling" contract under which it agreed to build the vessels over the next 3½ years at a maximum cost of $94,060,000. Any savings on the contract are split equally between the contractor and the government.

Goyer said the Quebec company could make no such guarantee "and this is due to the labor problems in the province."

"When a contractor tells you he cannot give assurances that his productivity will be high, there is a labor problem," he said. "It is not up to me to pass judgment on where the responsibility lies for this problem."

Clamps Urged On Imports Of TVs

OTTAWA (CP) — Pleading financial hardship, the predominantly foreign-owned domestic electronics industry urged the federal government Tuesday to put new restrictions on imports of U.S. and Japanese television sets and components.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie responded with a promise to study the problems of the industry, but said he gave no committment to reduce the inflow of foreign products.

Gillespie conferred for an hour with officials of the Electronic Industries Association of Canada who asked for a reduction to 30 per cent from about 50 per cent in the overall share of the domestic television market open to foreign companies.

Association president Leon Balcer, a former transport minister in the Progressive Conservative government of John Diefenbaker, said competition from abroad has seriously depressed sales. Jobs in the industry have dropped to 6,000 from 10,000 over the last five months, he said.

He said U.S. and Japanese competitors are dumping television receivers on the Canadian market at distress prices, further adding to the industry's difficulties.

Postal Suspensions 'Not Negotiable'

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday he will not withdraw suspensions against 49 Montreal postal employees "even in return for a national collective agreement."

"They are not negotiable," Mackasey told Walter Dinsdale (PC-Brandon-Souris) in the Commons.

Joe Davidson, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, has said the suspensions must be retracted before a new national working agreement can be reached.

"I am not wiping the suspensions out to please Mr. Davidson," Mackasey said.

"The quickest way to deal with the problem of automation and all the other problems is for him to stop running around the country and go back to the bargaining table where he belongs."

The government was prepared to "sit down and negotiate in good faith."

"There is not particular reason why a settlement could not be achieved in a matter of a couple of weeks if, for instance, that union where to bargain on money and fringe benefits and come up with a viable formula to deal with technology over the life of the contract," Mackasey said.

"If, however, one of the conditions of arriving at a settlement is that we waive or cancel the suspensions, I suspect we shall still be waiting for a settlement in 1980."

He said outside the House that the government "has no intention of bowing to Mr. Davidson's request."

The employees, who received indefinite suspensions a month ago, would not necessarily be fired.

"The length of suspension will vary with the particular infractions, ranging from a matter of days . . . to a matter of actual dismissal."

The workers were suspended after preventing casual employees from working. They said union members had not been offered overtime before the part-time workers were brought in.

DC-9 Probe Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Winnipeg South MP Dan McKenzie called Tuesday for an inquiry into the efficiency of modifications made to Air Canada's DC-9 fleet following an incident during a flight May 1.

The Conservative MP reported to the Commons that Air Canada flight 223 which left Ottawa that day, bound for Winnipeg and Regina was "abruptly returned" to Ottawa due to faulty equipment in depression components.

He said the fault caused upheaval in the luggage compartment and concern among the passengers.

McKenzie called for an emergency debate on his motion to instruct Transport Minister Jean Marchand to order an inquiry "into the efficiency and effectiveness of the 21 modifications performed on its fleet of DC-9 aircraft by Air Canada."

However, Liberal MPs refused to give the required unanimous consent for the debate.

Senators Slam Newspapers For Criticizing Raises

OTTAWA (CP) — Two senators attacked the news media Tuesday night as the Senate opened debate on controversial salary increases for parliamentarians.

"Newspapers are talking about parliamentary greed but most of them have hiked their prices more than 100 per cent," Ray Perrault, government Senate leader told an unusually large turnout of 60 senators in the 102-seat house.

Senator Ed Lawson (Ind-British Columbia) said reporters overlooked their wage increases in the last five years. salaries for B.C. reporters had climbed more than 70 per cent since 1970.

He said that about 1,000 civil servants in Ottawa earn at least $60,000 annually.

Many workers in his province had won wage increases since 1970 that were greater than 33 1/3-per-cent boost that senators and MPs were being asked to vote for themselves.

Senator Lawson, appointed in 1970, was Canadian director of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and president of the Teamsters joint council in British Columbia.

Parliamentarians must take the initiative to let "people know they're getting their money's worth," he said. People must realize the "considerable sacrifice involved and that they're getting an excellent return on their investment."

DOWNTREND NOTED IN WAGE HIKES

OTTAWA (CP) — Wage increases negotiated through collective bargaining show a downward trend in the first three months of 1975, the federal labor department reported Tuesday.

Of 69 settlements reached in the first three months of the year involving bargaining units of 500 or more employees, average annual increases in base pay rates were 16 per cent. Construction industry agreements are excluded.

Comparative figures for the last quarter of 1974 were 17.2 per cent. The department says the figures temper the upward trend in wage increases evident through 1974.

But of the 69 settlements, 35 are one-year agreements with average 18.6-per-cent raises in the year. This reflects an increasing trend toward shorter contracts as a means of combatting inflation.

In the 12 months ending in March, the cost-of-living rose 11.3 per cent.

In 1974, about one-third or 131 of 394 agreements were for one year. The percentage raises were 17 per cent in the one-year settlements.

In the 69 settlements in the first quarter of 1975, 20 provided for cost-of-living allowances compared with 153 of 394 with such allowances last year.

Bargaining units that won a cost-of-living allowance in the first quarter of 1975 won almost as much in basic pay increases as those which did not, getting annual average raises of 15.9 per cent compared with 16.1 per cent for those without the allowance.

In two-year agreements in the first quarter, the average increase was 20.2 per cent in the first year and 10.9 per cent in the second year. Three-year contracts contain average annual raises of 14.7 per cent in the first year, 4.8 per cent in the second year and 4.8 per cent in the third year.

Pipe Hearing Urged to Drop Canadian Bid

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A federal judge Thursday was urged to dismiss the Arctic Gas pipeline application because it is "so inaccurate."

The plea was made by Paul Connolly, attorney for El Paso Alaska Company, which has submitted a rival pipeline application.

It came during a second day of acrimonious argument between the lawyers for the two companies, appearing before Judge Nohum Litt at public hearings of the U.S. Federal Power Commission.

Connolly contended that it was unclear how much natural gas would be available to U.S. and Canadian consumers through the Arctic Gas system, which includes the Mackenzie Valley pipeline. He also charged that details of costs and material were inadequately and inaccurately spelled out.

He charged Arctic Gas with "monumental evasion" and said its spokesmen were engaged in "a verbal holding pattern."

Arctic Gas seeks FPC approval for a 195-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, to the Canadian border, where it would join the rest of a system of lines carrying both U.S. and Canadian gas to consumers in both countries.

El Paso proposes an all-American pipeline across Alaska, for U.S. gas only, which would be liquified and shipped by tankers to California, then reprocessed for U.S. Consumers.

Connolly suggested that the input of Canadian gas, which would come from the Mackenzie Delta, would be much less than Arctic Gas had previously led people to believe. He had earlier charged that U.S. distributors were claiming they would obtain even more gas than the Arctic Gas system could carry.

Connolly also charged that the size of the pipelines involved was unclear because the companies involved had submitted various alternatives, ranging from 49 to 30 inches in diameter.

"We've got to come to grips with your proposal — if we ever find out what it is," he told Arctic Gas Vice-Chairman William W. Brackett, who is the first witness at the hearings.

Unable to get the answers he sought from Brackett, Connolly turned to Judge Litt and said: "Their application is so inaccurate, I think that it should be dismissed."

The judge made no immediate comment.

However, he and Connolly tangled several times over the attorney's courtroom manner. Judge Litt told Connolly at one point that an FPC proceeding was different from a court case and that different rules applied.

PARADE TO HONOR RED CHEVRONS

Men retched and vomited and many died in their tracks.

Others soaked handkerchiefs in whatever moisture was at hand, using them as emergency gas masks.

It was May 7, 1915.

This was the first time poison gas was used in the First World War.

The grey-green gas rolled over the lines of the First Canadian Division and the Algerian troops on their flank. The Algerians fell back. The line was broken.

The Canadians held fast, their flank wide open.

They held the thin line in spite of repeated attacks by the German army to sweep through the gap left by the Algerians and make their way to the English Channel.

The untried Canadian troops stood firm, saving the day.

This was 60 years ago and history to most Canadians. But to the remaining members of the Red Chevron Association who were there the memories are still strong.

Tonight at 7:30 on the parade square at Work Point Barracks they will be honored at a parade arranged by the Royal United Services Institute of Vancouver Island.

Taking part will be local cadet units, including the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps of Victoria, the Admiral Budge Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps of Sidney, the Canadian Scottish Regiment Cadet Corps, the Victoria 5th. (B.C.) Battery Cadet Corps, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Corps of Esquimalt, the Victoria Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron and the Sidney Royal Canadian Air Squadron.

Major Walter Critchley (Rtd.), president of the Red Chevron Association, will inspect the cadets, joined by Lt.-Cmdr. Mike Considine (Rtd.) RUSI president, and Air Vice-Marshal G. R. Howsam (Rtd.).

More Flexibility Ahead In Liquor Licences—AG

Changes in B.C.'s liquor laws this session will allow greater flexibility in the kinds of liquor licences granted drinking establishments, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

Instead of fixed rules regarding the operations of lounges, pubs, cabarets and neighborhood pubs, said Macdonald, provision will be made in special circumstances to allow different kinds of drinking arrangements.

In a small community in the north, for example, a hotel-beer parlor may be the only drinking facility in the area and the government might consider hard liquor to be sold on the premises.

"The new kind of licensing will just be more flexible — I'm not talking about changing a policy of drinking liquor in beer parlors," said Macdonald.

Two new liquor acts will be introduced this legislative session and will provide for separate licensing and distribution branches as well as for further liberalization of B.C.'s liquor laws including provision for sale of beer in grocery stores and an end to the prohibition against consumption of beer and wine in public places.

Yachtsman's Memorial Thursday

A memorial service will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday in St. George the Martyr Church at Cadboro Bay for well-known local yachtsman Frank Willard Ohrt.

A life member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, he died Saturday at the age of 78.

A former club commodore, Ohrt worked on race and regatta committees for more than a quarter of a century and at one time was chairman of the Pacific International Yachting Association.

He was one of Britain's original First World War pilots, serving as a lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps' 54 squadron. He was shot down and suffered severe back injuries.

In spite of his injuries, he became an air raid warden at Cadboro Bay in the 1940s and was an active builder of wartime housing.

"He was a remarkable man, a fighter for the underdog and a philosopher," Humphrey Golby, another RVYC life member said Tuesday.

Ohrt came to Victoria in 1922. He is survived by his wife, Constance, of 647 Michigan; his sister, Mrs. Barton Wheelwright of Toronto, and his daughter, Mrs. Roderick (Helen) Tyson of Edmonton.

BOOKMOBILE TO SERVE VIEW ROYAL

Provincial government library development funds will enable bookmobile service to be extended Thursday to View Royal on a twice-a-month basis.

Greater Victoria Library said it had received two petitions among requests for extension of service in recent weeks and the View Royal schedule is being tried on a demonstration basis.

Books will be available at Chancellor and Helmcken 9:30-10:15 a.m., and at Christie Point 10:30-11:45 a.m. every second Thursday, for persons holding a special card valid in that area only.

Murder-Suicide Suspected

PARKSVILLE (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday a murder-suicide is suspected in the shooting deaths of a mother and son in this central Vancouver Island community.

The bodies of Carol Marie Crosby, 28, and her son, Todd Paul Crosby, 8 were found in their home Monday.

Yugoslav Party Plans Boycott Of Conference

BELGRADE (WP) — Yugoslav Communists have decided to boycott a pan-European conference of Communist parties on grounds that its objective is to impose unacceptable policies on all participants and in effect reassert Moscow's domination over the Communist movement in Europe, reliable sources said Monday.

The Communist summit, which is sponsored by the Russians and their allies, is scheduled to take place in East Berlin this summer, after the planned summit conference on European security and cooperation which is to be held in Helsinki.

The Russians have sought to organize a Communist conference of the type last held in Prague in 1967 in an apparent effort to impose a common line on the Communist parties of East and West Europe and to demonstrate that Moscow is still the center of world communism.

The Yugoslav decision has not been formally announced. But the executive secretary of the Yugoslav party, Stane Dolanc, made it clear in an interview published May 1 that the draft of a final document to be adopted at the East Berlin meeting was not acceptable to Belgrade because it includes "a program of obligatory joint actions and tasks."

Such a program, he said, would lead "to a coordination of activities by Communist parties," which he said "is impossible under current conditions, bearing in mind the fact that Communist parties act under different conditions."

The draft document was thrashed out by senior representatives of 28 European parties during a series of preparatory meetings. These meetings were boycotted by the Communist parties of Albania, the Netherlands and Iceland.

In the court of the preparatory sessions, the Yugoslavs have argued that the proposed Communist summit should adopt a resolution "which would only contain issues on which agreement by all parties has been reached." the Yugoslavs were reported to have been supported in varying degrees by the Communists from Romania, Italy, Spain and Sweden.

Average House Cost $116,000—Bennett

The average house purchased in Vancouver last year will cost its owner a total of $116,000, Opposition leader Bill Bennett told the legislature Tuesday.

Bennett said Multiple Listings Services statistics for 1974 show the average home in Vancouver cost $57,000 compared to $26,500 in 1971.

Mortgage costs for the average home would bring its total price up to $116,000, he said, with average monthly payments of $553 a month.

In 1971, the monthly payments for the average home in the city cost $202.

Bennett made the statements during Tuesday's debate of spending estimates for the housing department.

During the long debate, dominated almost entirely by Socred MLA Don Phillips (South Peace River), a non-confidence vote against Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson was defeated on a voice vote. The symbolic motion would have seen Nicholson's salary reduced by $1.

But the main motion to approve Nicolson's salary budget went to a formal vote and was approved 13 to 4.

Phillips said the NDP has made B.C. "a haven for land speculators."

People who have been selling their land to the government for huge profits "are selling their birthright and the birthright of generations to come," he said.

He said he didn't blame people who are threatened with expropriation or who face excessive tax increases but he blames those who sell to the government purely for a profit.

Phillips demanded the minister promise to allow people to own their own homes again and to bring back private enterprise in the housing field.

Throughout the long debate, Phillips called on Nicolson to prove how he has helped the housing situation in B.C. and to outline what he will do "to solve the chaos he has created."

Nicolson talks about plans for 3,000 to 4,000 housing units, said Phillips, when B.C. needs 50,000 a year.

Dailly Asks College Probe

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has asked the cabinet to appoint an independent commission to investigate financial practices of Vancouver Community College.

The commission has been accepted by education department and college officials, she said, and will be appointed as soon as possible.

"We've spent many weeks in trying to sort out budget problems and we both agree the meetings have not produced substantial answers to questions the department is asking," said Dailly.

The college maintains it needs $1.3 million more than the $19.2 million the department has approved, but earlier Dailly said there is insufficient documentation on the need for extra money.

Existing programs and staff will have to be cut back if the extra funds are not granted, according to college officials, but Dailly said all services to students will continue during the inquiry.

Labor Relations Commissioner Quits

Clay Perry, commissioner in charge of labor relations in the Public Service Commission, has resigned to work with the B.C. Cancer Institute here.

Povincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Perry's resignation takes effect June 1.

Perry was former executive assistant to Health Minister Dennis Cocke before taking the labor relations job. He also has worked with the B.C. Medical Association, the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, and was a director of research and education at Simon Fraser University.

Plane Tested

LONDON (Reuter) — The first Soviet MiG-21 fighter plane assembled in Uganda was successfully tested Tuesday in a flight from Kampala's Entebbe International Airport, a Uganda radio broadcast monitored here said.

Extra MD Bills: Out of Medicare

B.C. doctors who bill extra patients with Medicare will be prevented from participating in the service, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Tuesday.

The health department is keeping a list of specific doctors to see if a pattern of extra billing can be established, Cocke said.

"It's the only way to fly," he said.

The separate listing procedure, he said was started several months ago and has been criticized by the B.C. Medical Association, he said. "But I think it's my job to see that the taxpayers' money is properly spent."

Cocke said he is not aware that any doctors have been forced out of the Medicare program since the separate listing was started.

First step in dealing with frequent offenders will be a warning, said Cocke, and if a doctor persists in extra billing for services, the government will force the doctor to bill his patients directly, allowing the patient to bill Medicare.

"And doctors don't want to go back to that old system," said Cocke. "The two or three who opted out when Medicare first started, soon changed their minds."

A cabinet order-in-council gave the government powers to establish the precautionary system. Previously, said Cocke, doctors were permitted to opt out of Medicare but the government could not force them out.

Under no circumstances should patients be forced to pay more than the premium rate, said the health minister.

Under the "unfair" practice, doctors charge the patient a fee higher than the premium charged to Medicare.

"There aren't that many guilty parties. There are some names that reappear time and time again and those doctors will be hearing from us," cautioned Cocke.

The issue was raised in the legislature by Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace. He asked if the B.C. Medical Commission condones a separate list of physicians, handled on a personal basis rather than feeding the premium payments through the computer.

Cocke said he asked the BCMC to keep a record of doctors "acting unilaterally in a different way than the norm.

"We will use the list from time to time to ask doctors to live within the Medicare regulations or be cutoff."

Wallace asked for assurance that the list contains only the names of doctors who bill extra.

"I can't think of any other reason," said Cocke, who added he will consult with his department officials on the matter.

FARMERS' GRANTS

The provincial government has approved 920 applications from B.C. farmers for student employee wage subsidies under Careers '75, Labor Minister Bill King said Tuesday.

Up to $300 a month will be granted to the farmers under the 50-per cent wage subsidy program which allows hiring one or two students from May 1 to Aug. 31. Funds alloted for the program total $900,000.

Farmers will be permitted to hire sons and daughters under the plan, a feature intended to assist family farms in meeting financial obligations, said King.

The minister noted that more than 50 per cent of the applicants indicated they planned to hire at least one student who is a son or daughter.

Rent Case Handling Slammed

B.C. Rentalsman Barrie Clarke has abandoned his neutrality in dealing with a Courtenay landlord-tenant matter, Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace charged Tuesday.

He requested that the Attorney General Alex Macdonald investigate a case which he says indicates Clarke overstepped the power of his office.

The case involves a landlord who declined to pay a mobile home tenant's $300 bill for moving, said Wallace, who refused to name the individuals concerned.

Correspondence from the rentalsman's office initially advised the tenant that the matter should be settled through the courts.

Later, said Wallace, the tenant was advised that because the county court process is expensive, he could consider two other alternatives for settling the matter.

Both parties could proceed to arbitration, an unacceptable alternative because it requires consent of both parties, or, to "save expense", the rentalsman could launch legal action on behalf of the tenant.

"The rentalsman is supposed to be netural," charged Wallace. "God help us if the courts have moved so far into the background."

Wallace said correspondence indicates the rentalsman abused the power of an appointed government official and that Clarke has contradicted his original advice. "There was nothing about the landlord."

The case doesn't involve a large sum of money, said Wallace, but pinpoints an issue of principle.

"The landlord has taken legal advice and suggested I raise the matter on the floor of the house," said Wallace.

The MLA urged Macdonald to consider filing charges against the rentalsman.

Macdonald said the case had not been drawn previously to his attention.

"Quite a few of these allegations have no foundation in fact," he said.

'Step Forward' for Sharing Ethic—PM

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP) — "The global ethic of sharing has made a very significant step forward," Prime Minister Trudeau said at the end of the Commonwealth meeting Tuesday night.

He spoke as the leaders of 33 Commonwealth countries expressed satisfaction with their nine days of deliberations.

Trudeau called the conference a success although he was unable to convince delegates that the dangers of nuclear proliferation are as serious as the dangers inherent in the gap between rich and poor.

The leaders in a 56-paragraph communique announced the formation of a committee of 10 to make recommendations on the world economic order. Canadian officials considered this the main achievement of the conference.

The communique also:

—Repeated a committment to an independent black majority-ruled Rhodesia and warned that if the white-minority government of Ian Smith is not replaced by negotiations then armed struggle will resume.

Trudeau said African leaders are less strident than in the past and that calls for war have been changed to agreement to peaceful change and negotiation.

—Called for an end to nuclear testing and proliferation of nuclear weapons. It was during a discussion on this item that Trudeau met little response to his views Tuesday.

Trudeau told reporters:

"I think it is fair to say that as a result of discussions here the global ethic of sharing has made a very significant step forward.

"I think this forum has shown that the Commonwealth can indeed be a place where developed countries and lesser developed countries—countries from all parts of the world that represent one quarter of the world's population—have come to state quite clearly the need for this ethic and to work very precisely toward the implementation of such an ethic."

The economic committee will meet in Ottawa this summer to consider such diverse things as a radical plan to change the world economic order presented by Guyanan Prime Minister Forbes Burnham, a moderate plan to reform the commodities market from British Prime Minister Wilson and call from Trudeau for consideration of industrial co-operation.

HARD TO BARGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — Governments have become such a major economic force that they are finding it increasingly difficult to bargain collectively with the expanding civil service, a former B.C. Social Credit cabinet minister told the Ottawa Men's Canadian Club Tuesday.

Robert Bonner said that with about 40 per cent of the gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced—accounted for by government spending, this has created a new engine fuelling consumption in the economy.

Bonner was president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. of Vancouver until April, 1974, and now is in a private law practice.

He claimed that recent studies show about 58 per cent of federal spending is "uncontrollable" because it is required to fund government programs.

In British Columbia, uncontrollable expenditures are as much as 70 per cent, he said.

Balconies Hold an Advantage

Balcony gardeners away from the waterfront have the chance of getting their plants further advanced these days and nights than msot of us at ground level. Especially does this apply to balconies set back flush with the main concrete walls of the structure, since these are open on one side only.

A porous cotton or wool cover is not too difficult to arrange at night over a group of container-grown plants. The problem comes when the cover must be stored for future use. However, at this season, and again in the fall, whatever you plan to use can be folded and stacked in a corner of the balcony during the days where it will remain dry. A tub plant moved in front will hide it.

Be sure to dry the cover on mornings when it feels damp at removal time.

Tomato plants have already been seen for sale in six or seven-inch black whalehide pots. Some had a small herb plant in the same container.

If you have larger containers ready to receive tomato plants when you buy these, you msut decide whether to transplant by removing the black pot entirely or by at least stripping off the bottom. Either way you will get a larger root system and be able to have a more consistent supply of moisture in the soil around the whole root ball.

The herb plant may need moving into another container, depending on the kind. Parsley needs plentiful moisture as do tomatoes; it can also do with a bit of shade from hot sun. Chives like an open sunny spot so if you find a clump in the tomato pot, take it out and plant in a separate pot.

On good authority from a member of the local Green Thumb Club, plants which do well on a north-facing balcony include: dwarf petunias, upright fuchsias, dwarf lobelia, impatiens, and the tuberous and fibrous begonias. Plants must not be overwatered, nor must fertilizer be given before flowering is well established.

Not only outdoor plants appear on balconies during summer. From early June, many house plants improve their looks by getting more fresh air and light and the advantage of daily water misting over their foliage. Plants with hairy leaves do not take kindly to moisture drops, but many do like the more humid air of balconies.

In some situations, African Violets can spend three months arranged on balconies in wide trays of beach stones having water below the bottom of the plant pots. They may alternatively be bedded down into damp sand as is commonly done with alpine plants in pots.

This reminds me to tell you of the annual show on Friday and Saturday this week May 9 and 10 of the Victoria African Violet Society.

You will see a lovely display of pot plants, many related to African Violets, in glowing colors of orange, red and yellow, as well as all the beauties new and old of the "Violets" themselves.

The St. John Ambulance Hall, 941 Pandora Avenue is the place; the times Friday from 2 until 9 p.m.; Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All with an interest in pot plants of special beauty will find much to see and learn at this African Violet Show.

Had our South declarer in today's deal given throught to the practical significance of East's play at trick one, he would have fulfilled his contract. But, as will become evident in a moment, South played mechanically, giving no thought to East's play to the first trick. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

♣ A 6 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♦.

West made a good guess when he elected to lead a diamond, South's bid suit. Had he chosen to lead any other suit, declarer would have fulfilled his contract, for upon gaining the lead, he would have cashed the queen and jack of spades, and then the ace and king of diamonds. With East failing to follow suit to the second diamond lead, dummy's jack would have served as an entry to dummy, for the cashing of the two top spades

On West's opening lead of the diamond three, the five was played from dummy, East followed with the four-spot and South played the deuce. The six of diamonds was then led, East discarding a heart as declarer captured the trick with his ace. As is evident, declarer was unable to cash four spade tricks, since he could not reach dummy except by overtaking one of his top spades with dummy's king. And so he went down a trick.

When East followed suit with the diamond four on dummy's five-spot, it should have been celar to declarer that East possessed no higher diamond — and that, hence, West had started with the Q-10-7-3. Had declarer recognized this position, he would have been able to utilize dummy's jack of diamonds as an entry to dummy for the cashing of the ace and king of spades.

Instead of winning the opening lead as economically as possible, declarer should have won the trick with his king of diamonds. Then would come the ace of diamonds, revealing that East's four of diamonds was, in fact, a singleton. Next would come the queen of spades, followed by the spade jack. A low diamond would then be led towards dummy's J-8. West, having the Q-10 left, couldn't now prevent the board's jack from winning a trick.

Had the declarer played the hand as recommended, he would have ended up making four spade tricks, three diamonds, a heart and a club. But, as has been shown, he played too hurriedly at trick one.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Say, I forgot my wallet!" exclaimed Ben. "So I can only pay 97 cents."

Dick glanced at the check, and passed it to Roy. "Okay, you can make it up next time," he said, putting some money on the table. "We all had the same. Here's 50 cents more than my proper share, and Roy can take care of the rest."

"You'd be in big trouble without me," Roy chuckled. "But here's the balance, and it's just half as much again as you've paid, Dick."

What was the total amount for their three meals?

(Answer tomorrow).

Yesterday's answer: LAD was 734 (even).

Insurance Plan Urged in School

VANCOUVER (CP) — A motion urging the province to set up a no-fault accident compensation program to deal with school related accidents was pssed Monday by British Columbia's school trustees.

The motion was proposed by Prince George School Board, the board which was assessed $1.5 million damages in February for injuries suffered by a local 14-year old student.

The proposed no-fault scheme would be similar to Workman's Compensation, and would help eliminate high civil court damages of the kind experienced by Prince George school board.

The proposal was considered by nearly 650 delegates at the second day of the B.C. School Trustees Association annual meeting.

Some delegates argued that the scheme would eliminate a person's legal right to take civil action in court. Others said that with such a scheme, compensation would be made immediately and victims would not be made to endure protracted delays without financial compensation.

Mac Carpenter, secretary-treasurer of the Prince George School Board, said compensation would take the form of regular payments rather than a single lump sum.

He said that because settlements would be decided by a single board rather than a variety of judges, damage payments would be much more consistent in similar cases.

OLYMPIC FIREARM SAFETY

MONTREAL (CP) — Competitors in shooting events at the 1976 Summer Olympics will not be allowed to bring their firearms into the Olympic village, the committee for organizing the games announced Monday.

It would be the first time in Olympic history that such a restriction has been placed on the Games's target shooters.

"It's because of recent events that we have had to take this measure," said Pierre Charbonneau, a vice-president of the organizing committee. "We have agreed from the outset with security staff that there would be no firearms in the village."

Upon their arrival at Mirabel or Dorval airport, the head of each shooting team will hand over his team's arms to organizing committee security personnel, who will transport them to the site of the Olympic shooting range in L'Acadie, Charbonneau said.

Kuwait Richest In the World

ZURICH (AP) — Based on per-capita Gross National Product, Kuwait was the world's richest country last year, with $11,000 worth of goods and services for each person in the land, said a study released today by a Swiss bank. Canada was in sixth place behind the United States and several European countries.

The Union Bank of Switzerland said its study, based on 1974 figures, showed most oil-producing countries still trail the Western industrialized countries in per-capita GNP.

Switzerland was second on Union Bank's list, with per-capita GNP of $7,270, followed by Sweden at $6,840, Denmark at $6,800 and the United States at $6,595. Kuwait had a real GNP growth rate, after discounting inflation, of 12 per cent in 1974, the study showed.

Others on the 30-nation list included Canada at $6,340, West Germany at $6,215, Norway $5,820, France $5,390 and Australia $5,370. Britain was well down at $3,385. Italy's $2,700 was still slightly higher than Saudi Arabia's $2,650 and Venezuela's $2,275. Iran's per-capita GNP was put at $1,275.

Sino-Soviet Talks Appear Broken Off

By JOHN BURNS

PEKING — Leonid Ilyichev, head of the Soviet delegation to the deadlocked Sino-Soviet border talks, left Peking Tuesday for Moscow, diplomatic sources said.

Ilyichev's departure came less than three months after his return to the Chinese capital Feb. 12. Before that he had been gone from Peking for more than six months, ostensibly tied up in Moscow by the Cyprus crisis.

Since his return earlier in the year, there have been regular sessions of the border discussions usually once a week. But sources close to the Soviet delegation reported that no progress had been made up to the point in mid-April when the sessions were interrupted to allow the Russians to go on a two-week tour of southern China, an annual event.

The talks began more than five-and-a-half years ago following a series of armed clashes along the border in the spring and early summer of 1969. They have been deadlocked since the beginning over the implementation of a cooling-off agreement tentatively concluded by the two premiers, Alexei Kosygin and Chou En-lai, when they met at Peking airport in September, 1969.

Diplomatic sources report that the principal obstacle to progress has been Chinese insistence on the withdrawal of Soviet troops from disputed areas along the 4,500-mile border. Since the Russians consider the areas to be indisputably their territory, they are opposed to military withdrawals which might imply otherwise, the sources say.

Chinese officials, who also claim that the most recent sessions produced no progress, argue that it is better to continue the discussions, however fruitless, than to break them off and risk resumption of the hostilities.

However, a very senior official who himself headed the Chinese delegation to the talks at an earlier stage of the negotiations conceded recently that the tedium of continuing deadlocked discussions was considerable. "There is nothing more boring in the world than negotiating with the Russians," he said.

Forest Fire Hazard Low

While the forest fire hazard remains low on Vancouver Island, B.C. Forest Serice reported today 21 small grass fires in the interior of the province.

The fire season officially opened Monday but there is little danger of forest fires on the island as long as cool temperatures prevail, fire chief protection officer W. C. Phillips said.

He said while campfire permits are no longer required, all debris and clean up fires must be authorized by the forest service.

"Too many forest fires are started by escaped brush fires," he explained. "It's a serious problem caused by a misunderstanding of the dangers involved."

BRIDLE BITS

with phil merrick

The cherry trees won the race! For the last two months there has been speculation as to whether the broodmare grazing in the Cherry Orchard would produce a foal before the cherry orchard exploded into bloom. The one or two warmer days of last week gave the trees the needed sunshine to produce blossom. It seems more than sunshine is needed to persuade the lady to bring forth her foal, now more than two weeks past due.

The expectant mother is a flea-bitten grey, almost white, quite a big mare. Among the trees, heavy with the white blossom, the lady blends into the scenery to create an almost ghostly sight. Now everyone is hoping the foal will arrive before the blossom blows away and the green leaves take over.

Last weekend offered the greatest variety of equinine events: The Driving Show at the Saanichton Fair Grounds, Western Trail Horse competitions at the Bissenden property on Arrow Road, and the Spring Schooling Show at Glenshe Farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Al Reside.

Perhaps the most interesting for spectators, of which there were a great number, was the driving show at Saanichton. The presence of Arthur Perry, Jr., of Santa Barbara, Calif., as judge no doubt was the main reason for the large entry of more than 50 contestants.

Twenty-three classes were offered so all breeds of horses were catered to. Vintage classes, some entries of vehicles over 100 years old were interesting and spectacular as class conditions called for drivers and passengers to be attired in the dress of the era of the vehicle.

Perry stated he was most impressed by the driving ability of the juniors in the junior driver events. Show manager was Arnold L. Mason and Mrs. Doris Ganton arranged the events and directed the show.

★ ★ ★

Over 30 entrants vied for the prizes and ribbons at the Trail Horse Competitions, organized and managed by Jimmy Bissenden. The course consisted of up to 40 obstacles depending on the conditions of each event offered. The more experienced riders and horses met with tougher sections to be negotiated.

★ ★ ★

Glenshe Stables schooling show brought out nearly 80 entries. With the show season about to open riders took advantage of this show to get their horses into a show ring under show conditions.

Horses that have already been shipped away to early shows on the Mainland were at Glenshe, probably to work out some problems encountered earlier.

These schooling shows enable newcomers to the horse show game to get a baptism under less pressure than a formal show. However these shows are not treated lightly by competitors who bring their best horses, wear their best clothes and give every effort to win the ribbons offered.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Reside were hosts of the show. Their daughter, Mrs. Sheila Attfield was show manager. The announcing duties were handled by Geoff Robbins, who is quite at home in this capacity.

For many years past the Garden City Horsemen's Club has organized a 100-mile ride around the end of May each year. Entries for this year's ride will be accepted by Mrs. C. Barteaux at 658-5591. This event is always popular and more applications for entrants are received than can be accommodated.

The last few years a base camp has been set up on property owned by Mr. and Mrs. Reg Rigby at Cowichan Station. Each of the three days of the ride a different trail is taken to give the riders a variety of territory. The rides are of about 30 miles each day so a fit horse and rider will add to the enjoyment.

★ ★ ★

Sunday, May 18, 10 a.m., rain or shine, Sooke Saddle Club's 3rd annual competition trail ride will be held. Proper western or English attire and equipment is required.

Entry fees: juniors $3, seniors, $4 and this covers a hot supper.

Entry forms available from: Corral Shop, Circle E Shop in Victoria; Bluenose Sporting Goods, Sooke, and Saseenos Shop.

Entries must be received by Wednesday, May 14.

Labor Leaders Balk

Times News Service

TORONTO — Canadian Labor Congress leaders said today they will only agree to a federal government call for voluntary wage restraint if the government introduces a program to tprovide more equitable distribution of income and restraints on rents, dividends, profits, professional fees, land speculation and housing.

Leaders of the 1.9 million-member labor organization made a statement on wage restraint proposals, advanced by Finance Minister John Turner, after a morning meeting of the heads of 60 unions.

"The labor movement is willing to do its part in the fight against inflation, but it will never consent to discriminatory treatment against wage earners, pensioners and those who have no means to protect themselves," the congress position paper said.

Congress president Joe Morris said no program of wage restraint can be considered acceptable to labor unless it covers the following:

—Curbs on oil and gas prices "which have contributed to the fueling of inflation."

—A major effort to improve the supply of housing — "This has seriously deteriorated and eroded real incomes through higher housing costs."

—Regulation of rents to curb gouging of tenants.

—Action to stop land speculation.

—Higher old-age pensions.

—Guarantees that tax concessions to corporations will be invested to create jobs "and not end up in the payment of higher dividends."

—Full employment policies to get rid of current high levels of unemployment.

—Action to control fees in the professions.

—Tax credits to protect tho-

—Tax credits to protect those with little or no bargaining power and who make up the bottom end of the incomes scale.

Prime target of labor's displeasure has been a confidential government document leaked to the press this week which proposes maximum wage increases of 12 per cent or $2,400 — whichever is lower — in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of the program.

The confidential document, which congress leaders did not get until Monday afternoon — after it was published in the press—sets out a plan to reduce the rate of inflation to 3.5 per cent a year by the last quarter of 1978.

The rate of inflation in the last quarter of 1978.

third quarter of 1975 is expected to be 10 per cent.

The document includes a table in hich workers who gained less than the national average in wage increases in the last two years will get the maximum 12 per cent.

Those who won more than the national average gain would have their maximum per-cent raises reduced proportionately.

Professional fees would be goverened by the same principles applying to wages.

In general, price increases would be limited to the amount sufficient to cover cost increases and guides would only apply to interest rates set by banks and other financial institutions. There are no restraints proposed in the document for dividends.

Meanwhile, NDP parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent said Tuesday government anti-inflation programs are wage controls without price controls.

"It's clearly a set of documents aimed at working people only," Broadbent said of government working papers distributed to labor leaders.

ROYAL REVAMPS MORTGAGE RATES

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada restructured its system of mortgage rates Tuesday in an effort to channel more funds into new housing construction and less into existing housing.

The rate for mortgages on existing housing will rise to 11 per cent for both National Housing Act (NHA) mortgages and conventional mortgages. The maximum mortgage granted on existing housing will be cut to $25,000 from $60,000.

The rates on new housing will not change. NHA mortgages will remain at 10.5 per cent and conventional mortgages at 10.75 per cent.

"The move has been made necessary by the unprecedented demand for mortgage funds which, if unchecked, would have exhausted our year's allocation in short order," said Rowland Frazee, Royal's executive vice-president and general manager.

"The $25,000 ceiling on mortgages on existing housing is intended to ensure that funds which continue to flow into this sector will be spread over the largest number of housing units and, in fact, will flow to the lower-priced sector of the markets," he said.

A number of trust companies, including Canada Permanent Trust Co. of Toronto, have reported they are out of funds and are not accepting new mortgage applications.

City Body Shop Rate $20

Victoria area body shops will break rank and raise their hourly rate to $20 from the government-set rate of $15.50 effective May 15.

An ICBC spokesman in Vancouver said today Victoria is the only area in the province where body shop operators have planned unilateral action to raise rates.

Dennis Butner, president of the Victoria unit of the Automotive Retailers Association, said today the raise is planned to meet higher operating costs. He said the current Insurance Corporation of B.C. Autoplan payment is not realistic in terms of the body shop operators' main concern—higher operating costs, taxes and wages.

Wage settlement yet to be made are expected to be between $8 and $9 an hour, plus 2 per cent holiday pay, he said. Meanwhile, shop charge-out rates cannot be made retroactive.

ICBC is now doing studies on the body shop rates in effect and will probably start talks with representatives of the ARA within the next month, the ICBC spokesman said.

Victoria body shop operators have raised the rates here several times before out of concert with the rest of B.C.

The last time the rates were raised above the ICBC approved rate, the insurance corporation re-instituted the old bid system for body work. A motorist was required to get three bids on the work to be done and ICBC would pay the lowest estimate, even if it was above the going rate.

But Victoria operators thwarted the system by refusing to give bids and motorists were forced to pay the surcharge out of their own pockets.

Liberal Showdown ... One Will Resign

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The Liberal party is headed for a showdown over the unity movement at this month's policy convention and, whatever the outcome, at least one MLA will resign from the party.

Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) announced Tuesday he will resign from the party if delegates at the May 24-26 Liberal convention do not support the concept of moving towards "a coalescing of the free enterprise parties."

If he resigns, Williams said he will sit as an independent and decide later whether to leave politics or join the Social Credit party.

But Liberal leader David Anderson said if the party moves to support a unity or coalition movement he will resign as leader and also sit as an independent.

In Vancouver, the Vancouver-Burrard Liberal Constituency Association Tuesday night came out in full support of Anderson.

The association approved a resolution stating its opposition to a unity party in any form and urging that Liberal candidates run in every constituency in B.C. in the next provincial election.

Anderson said he has been identified with a party stand against involvement with unity and if the party changes

Cong Pledge Leniency

Times News Services

SAIGON — "A sea of people" gathered at South Vietnam's former presidential palace today and heard the commanding general of the Saigon area promise leniency for former opponents of the Viet Cong, Saigon radio reported.

The mass rally, to introduce the new administration for the Saigon region, marked the regime's first week in power.

Gen. Tran Van Tra, who led the attack on the capital city in the 1968 Tet offensive and later represented the Viet Cong on the joint military Commission, promised severe punishment for any who "serve as henchmen for foreign countries."

But he offered leniency and understanding for soldiers and officials of the old government and respect for the lives and property of foreign residents "providing they earn an honest living through clean business" and obey laws and orders.

The general called on Viet Cong soldiers and cadre to stay ready to "smash all counter-revolutionary schemes."

Reprieve for Murderer Buys Allmand Study Time

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — After obtaining a stay of execution for convicted murderer Rene Vaillancourt yesterday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said the reprieve would give cabinet time to study the whole question of capital punishment.

Vaillancourt was scheduled to hang May 15 for the shooting death of a Toronto police constable in a 1973 holdup and the question of commuting his sentence was "too complex" to be decided by Cabinet now, almand told newsmen. Two memers of his jury recommended clemency.

Taken into consideration was the fact that there are now eight men awaiting death for killing policemen or jail guards on duty.

The solicitor general also said that a stay of execution has been granted in the case of John Francis Connearney, sentenced to hang in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail April 25.

There was a "very important possibility" that legislation would be introduced before Vaillancourt's new execution date — October 31 — to end all capital punishment in Canada, the solicitor-general added.

He was personally committed to a total ban on hanging and between now and Oct. 31 "I intend to pursue my goal of abolishing the death penalty."

All death sentences have been commuted since 1962 when Canada's last hangings occurred in Toronto.

Allmand felt that the tide of public opinion was changing from a hard line favoring capital punishnent to a stance "more in favor of abolition," according to letters received by his office.

25 FLEE FIRE IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 80 firemen and 15 pieces of equipment brought under control a three-alarm fire that destroyed three buildings in Vancouver's Skid Road district early today.

Fire officials said it was believed the 25 residents, mostly elderly men, all were safely evacuated from the building at Main and Powell.

At one point, firemen thought they would have to evacuate a city block if a fourth building, a three-storey rooming house, caught fire, but the fire was controlled before this was necessary.

Recycling Depot Braced

The recycling depot on Borden at McKenzie will be back in business Saturday at 9 a.m. — and braced for the bottles and cans piling up in homes through three months of labor strife.

But, spokesman David Jackman said Tuesday, there are 100 tons of old newspapers in the depot now and no room for more until they have been moved out.

Jackman said he received about 15 to 20 calls early Tuesday, the first day the regional staff was back on the job since being locked out early in February.

"We really expect quite a lot of people on Saturday."

The recycling depot expects to resume its regular hours next week, that is, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

For now, what it can handle is glass bottles, cleaned and flattened tin cans, clean aluminum foil, corrugated boxes and brown kraft bags.

Later, it will be able to take the bundles of newspapers.

Jackman said the staff is digging its way through the heaps of material left in the parking lot outside the depot.

Later this week the staff will meet to decide what order the mobile clinics it has operated elsewhere in the community will be brought back into action.

Police Willing to End Lock-Up Duties

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory today welcomed the idea that responsibility for lock-up facilities be taken from police and given to another body.

The proposal that the attorney-general's department assume responsibility for lock-up and remand facilities in the B.C. criminal courts system to end an "atrocious and inhumane" system was contained in a government report released Tuesday.

The report, prepared for the Justice Development Commission by Jack Cram, vice-chairman of the attorney-general department's courts division, recommends that lock-ups be supervised by sheriff's officers instead of police.

"It would relieve us of a tremendous workload," said Gregory.

"The whole thing could perhaps be handled at less expense by the sheriff's office."

Cram's report also recommends that remand centres should be operated by sheriffs rather than the corrections department.

The report says atrocious conditions are likely to remain if municipalities, through the police, retain responsibility.

"There is a fundamental injustice in the police retaining custody of a prisoner once he has been charged; the accused should not be in custody of his accuser."

Cram recommends that the accused be turned over to a neutral custodian as soon as possible following his arrest and that interviews and line-ups be conducted in a neutral location.

The current system pays lip service to the presumption of innocence and yet permits accused persons to be held by correctional officers before they are convicted and in need of correction.

"In addition to inhumane and inconsistent treatment of prisoners awaiting trial, there are many inefficienoies in the operation of lock-ups and remand centres."

Cram suggests establishment of small lock-up centres around the province to lessen need for transportation.

He recommends that all courts be integrated and criminal courts and counsel provide flexibility to accommodate trials of accused persons in custody.

County-Supreme court sittings should be continued during July and August and time limits for disposition of criminal cases should be investigated.

"The problem most frequently voiced by judges, lawyers police, corrections personnel and the public at large,

Que. Building Clean-Up Urged

QUEBEC (CP)—Opposition cries for the resignation of Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer greeted tabling in the national assembly Tuesday of the Cliche Commission report urging a major clean-up of the Quebec construction industry.

Employers, union leaders and government personnel shared the blame for the spread of rampant lawlessness and confusion in the industry, the 603-page report said.

The commission declined to rule on the role played by Mr. Cournoyer in the industry's deterioration. The report suggested it will be up to the electorate to pass judgment on charges of employers and unions that the labor minister failed to demand respect for the law and gave preferential treatment to the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) over Quebec's two other labor groups.

Among the main changes proposed in the report by commission chairman Judge Robert Cliche and his two fellow commissioners are:

—Imposition of three-year trusteeships on the Montreal locals of electricians', plumbers' and heavy equipment operators' unions affiliated to the QFL, also on the Montreal-based Local 89 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

—Creation of a regulatory "construction agency" to replace the corruption-riddled Construction Industry Commission (CIC) in administering wages and working conditions in the industry.

—Abolition of union hiring halls and putting responsibility for job placement of all construction workers in the hands of the proposed construction agency.

—Institution of five-year plans for construction projects, aimed at stabilising the industry, and the introduction of job security and guaranteed income for construction workers.

—Licensing by the department of financial institutions of all contractors to guarantee their solvency and competence.

The three-man inquiry was established by the Liberal government in March, 1974, after the main job site of the James Bay hydroelectric power project in northwestern Quebec was ransacked.

Many of the industry's problems stemmed from the infiltration of leadership positions of three QFL-affiliated construction unions by criminal elements during the last five years, the report says.

These unions—Local 791 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 144 of the United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Trades of the United States and Canada, and Local 1677 of the Interprovincial Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—should be placed in the hands of three-man boards of trustees, the commission urges.

The report says trusteeship is the only way to eliminate corrupt elements from the unions and to prevent the comeback of Andre Desjardins, former leader of the QFL's 23-union construction wing.

The report describes Desjardins as an unscrupulous power-grabber who tolerated criminal activities in the unions and who opened the door to underworld infiltration.

To guard against abuses by employers and government officers, the report recommends a tighter government and rank-and-file scrutiny of union affairs. It also urges codification of all construction laws with stiffer penalties for employers or workers who offer, give or receive payoffs.

Those with criminal records would be barred from holding union office for five years following their admission to the union.

A special section of the justice department would lay all charges for industry violations before a proposed construction tribunal.

Unions should be incorporated and be required to submit yearly financial statements to the department of financial institutions.

To prevent dictatorship by union hierarchies, union elections and collective agreements would have to be ratified by a secret ballot among the general membership.

For negotiating purposes, employers would have to be represented by a single association established specifically to handle labor relations.

On the union side, only a union or unions grouping at least 75 per cent of workers would have the right to sign a collective agreement.

The report was submitted to the government last week by Judge Cliche and fellow commissioners Brian Mulroney, a Montreal management lawyer, and Guy Chevrette of Joliette, Que., a vice-president of the Quebec Teachers' Corporation.

Ryan was struck by three or four police bullets during a gun battle at the Scarborough Town Centre about an hour after Habib was shot to death.

Manpower Nudges Merchants To Employ the Inexperienced

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The word has gone out from Canada Manpower to Victoria businessmen to hire the inexperienced worker this summer.

"We realize it is difficult for young people to get their first job because they lack experience," Canada Manpower counsellor D. N. Yearwood said in an interview.

"So we are meeting with Victoria merchants and urging them to make some jobs available for those who are enthusiastic but have no experience.

"They have indicated that they will do this."

Yearwood said the merchants will be judging most young applicants on the basis of enthusiasm and personality rather than on experience and skills.

For this reason, young people should not be discouraged but should keep knocking on doors asking for work.

He said the job situation at the moment is a bit difficult for young people — but it would get better soon.

When the Canada Manpower youth office opened at 824 Johnson on April 28 more than 400 people registered in the first day applying for the 20 jobs available.

At the same time last year there were about 150 jobs listed.

The low number this year is due to the municipal labor dispute and the slow beginning to the tourist season.

Yearwood said tourist-oriented businesses have indicated they will be hiring young people later this month. The total number of jobs on the Canada Manpower youth board is expected to rise to 100 by month's end.

At the same time, there will be about 400 other jobs available that have not been listed at the Canada Manpower office. These can be obtained by going directly to the companies involved.

The present scarcity of jobs has been particularly devastating for university students who are normally at work by May.

"Last year, they were particular about the type of work they were doing but this year they are taking anything available," Yearwood said.

With the end of the municipal strike, about 50 to 60 jobs will become available in the form of playground supervisors and lifeguards. The lifeguards must first take a course at a community swimming pool.

Jobs that are expected to become more plentiful this month, with the increased tourist flow, include waitresses and bus boys, chambermaids and cleaning personnel.

B.C. Ferries will be hiring summer help and young people will be needed to assist with heavy labor projects. These jobs include carrying lumber for construction projects and lighter work with road crews such as raking and traffic control.

Despite the present job shortage, young people are being urged to register at the Canada Manpower youth office, to check the job board and watch the newspapers for job opportunities.

"Knocking on doors is still the most effective way to get a job," Yearwood said.

"If an employer is impressed by your enthusiasm the chances are good he will hire you, knowing you will learn the job quickly."

Dock's Toilets Called Racist

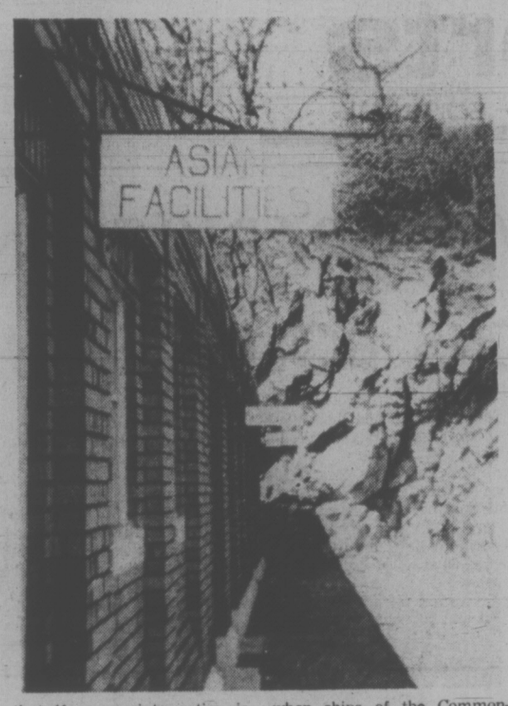
A sign over a washroom at the federal government's graving dock in Esquimalt which reads "Asian Facilities" is offensive, obnoxious and racist, a union official says.

Federal Public Works Minister C. M. Drury has been asked in a letter to take immediate action by instructing the dock superintendent to remove the sign which marks special toilet facilities for Asian seamen.

The letter, written by Victoria Boilermakers' Union business manager Neil Hindle, says that Hindle has discussed the sign several times with David Holmes, the graving dock superintendent, "and I regret to say he would not comply with my request to remove and change this obnoxious and racist sign."

A spokesman in the superintendent's office said Holmes was out of the office until Thursday.

The toilets in the "Asian Facilities" consist of two foot marks on the floor and a draining hole in the floor — a system widely used in Mid-Eastern and Asian countries.



Hindle says in the letter that if appropriate action is not taken by the public works department, he will recommend that members of the trade union movement boycott the graving dock.

Hindle suggests that because the dock is a federal port of entry, international symbols, such as those used in airports and other public buildings, should be used.

"The use of international symbols is . . . what is called for in this situation, especially when ships of the Commonwealth, as well as other nations, frequent this area and to be greeted with this racist sign can only bring shame to all Canadians," Hindle says in the letter.

Hindle said today he wasn't suggesting that regular toilets be installed, only that the international symbols be used.

It is likely that many Asian seamen would not be able to read the sign anyway, as it is printed only in English.

Outdoor Journal Won't Show

For the first time since it appeared in March, 1974, the Victoria-based Vancouver Island's Outdoor Journal will not be published this Thursday.

The tabloid weekly, with a circulation of nearly 7,000 has run into financial trouble.

Accountant Frank Lee said today the journal was also faced with editorial problems. He said Jack Paskavan, the former editor quit his job suddenly and left for somewhere in the United States.

The Journal was the only weekly of its kind in Canada, focussing on outdoor activities such as fishing, hunting, hiking and camping, and dealing with environmental and conservation issues.

"We had a paid subscription of nearly 3,000 and had newsstand sales of about 4,000 so there's a call for this sort of thing," Lee said. "It could still be a viable operation if somebody stepped in with more expertise."

He said between $6,000 and $7,000 was needed immediately to put the Journal back on its financial feet. Publication will cease until financial backing is available.

The Journal generally ran 12 to 16 tabloid pages and was popular with conservationists and others interested in the outdoors.

CUPE Lists Priorities For Saanich Talks

Counter-proposals listing eight contract priorities will be presented by Saanich municipal workers when negotiations sought by their union resume within a few days.

The members of Local 374 Canadian Union of Public Employees meanwhile are due back at their jobs Thursday, the last of a total of more than 1,700 civic and school workers to do so after disruption of local services in an area strike-lockout that started Jan. 27.

The Saanich CUPE unit held out for further negotiations dealing with parochial matters rather than accept an area-wide settlement proposal adopted by the municipalities and four CUPE locals to provide substantial wage gains in a two-year contract.

Local 374 president Jim Brett said union's proposals had been given executive endorsation and would be described to a regular meeting of the membership today.

Sidney inside and outside staff is in a similar position to Saanich, having rejected the area proposal. Arrangements for negotiation are expected to be broached Thursday.

In Esquimalt, the staff was back at work today following the lifting of the lockout effective Tuesday. The union seeks renegotiation of local matters in this municipality, too, but talks will not start until the Labor Relations Board has decided whether the lockout was illegal, as the union claims.

Brett said Saanich Local 374 will make "reasonable requests" for contract provisions applicable in Saanich.

"We're not asking for the moon," he said, indicating there are "some priority items here that the members feel strongly about it."

They include definition of a tradesman's rate for certified employees, rather than an hourly differential; non-discriminatory shift differentials; application of the area wage increase to provide improvement to the middle range of inside workers.

In addition, the local wants overtime to be on a voluntary basis, an increment in the premium paid for dirty jobs such as sewer work, re-definition of severance pay without being tied to pension money, rewording of a condition of settlement dealing with union disciplinary action to avoid conflict with the CUPE constitution, and an LRB ruling on contract language dealing with coverage during the period between contracts.

In Saanich and Esquimalt, councils have taken a firm stand that any further negotiating must not tamper with the monetary aspects of the area settlement.

Non-union senior personnel in the area, who tried to maintain essential services during the dispute, are putting staffs back to work on a priority basis in Victoria, Oak Bay, Sidney and Esquimalt, where disposal of temporary garbage dumps rates high. Normal garbage collection will not be apparent for weeks in some areas.

Young Lady In Big Hurry

The lady was not for waiting but had trouble convincing those about her.

Shortly before 6 a.m. today she started to kick and complain.

Her father, Alan Planes, 21, of 5621 Sooke, thought it was a false alarm but her mother Laurie, 19, had her doubts. She called a sister-in-law, Karen Planes, of 337 Henry, in Victoria, for help.

Karen thought it was a false alarm too. She took her time driving out and when she arrived Alan left for work.

On the drive into town Laurie let out a yelp.

Karen realized she wouldn't be able to reach Victoria in time. She stopped the car and raced to a house at 3061 Sooke Road where a startled Joyce Watson let them in.

Mrs. Watson put fresh sheets on her bed and Laurie walked calmly into the room.

Minutes later, said Mrs. Watson, there was "a little cry."

Mother and the as yet unnamed daughter are doing fine in Victoria General Hospital.

He Can Carry a Tune But Load Gets Heavy

Juggling two huge pianos across this broad nation and back — just wouldn't be most people's idea of fun.

But to Dave Lewis, for nearly half a century Victoria's piano-mover supreme, it's a cinch.

Dave returned recently from two long concert tours with Victoria pianists Robin and Winifred Wood and says "there was plenty of sweating, but no problems."

Arranged by the Overture Concerts Association under well-known bassoon player and impressario George Zukerman of Vancouver, the first tour took the Woods through Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. and the second started at Oshawa in Ontario and ended in Edmonton.

★

Together the two tours covered more than 12,000 miles. And that's a lot of piano-hauling. But as Robin points out, they took two grand pianos — two matched Yamahas — "because getting one good piano in a hall is pretty difficult but getting two pianos matched is almost impossible."

Mostly Robin and his wife flew the longer distances. The tough part was left to Lewis. And the toughest thing was that at each place volunteers helped him get the pianos off and on the truck.

"And some of these were just kids who happened to be playing basketball there at the time," he laughs. "It was cold in a lot of the places and sometimes I had to put up a ramp to get over snow as high as that window."

For each move, the legs and lid had to be taken off the grand pianos and then put back on inside the hall.

"In all, I knocked 'em down and put 'em together again 48 times," says Dave.

The Woods played the standard repertoire for two pianos — Variations on a Theme of Beethoven by Saint-Saens, Mozart's Sonata for Two Pianos, and Rachmaninoff's Suite No. 2 plus a number of Robin's own arrangements. Their concerts were well received by audiences that averaged 350 but grew to about 800 in Nelson, B.C., and even more than that in Edmonton.

They certainly aren't lacking in experience.

"We've played two pianos together since we were married in 1948," says Robin.

Their story, in fact, is one of romance at the keyboard.

Robin, born in Victoria and Winifred Scott, a former child prodigy in Winnipeg, met on a boat on the way to England. Both were heading for studies at the Royal Academy of Music in London.

DAVE LEWIS . . . moving 48 years

They married in England and lived in London for 19 years. For 10 of those years they both taught music at the Royal Academy.

The Woods returned to Canada in 1965 and in 1966 Robin took over as principal of the Victoria Conservatory of Music. Then, it had only 60 students in a building on Pandora Avenue. Today, with Robin as principal and Winifred as vice-principal, the Academy is based in the historic old Craigdarroch Castle and has more than 1,500 students from all over the western provinces, the United States, Hong Kong and even a couple from England.

Their love of music has been inherited by their children, 15-year-old Ben and 11-year-old Laura. Both are pianists and Laura played in the just-concluded Victoria Music Festival.

David Evan Lewis, who as his name tells is of Welsh origin, has also led a life filled with music — and not just from the pianos he's been shoving around.

"All the family used to sing," he says distantly, "and my mother, who died recently at the age of 93, sang in the Vic West United Church Choir for 55 years."

Dave himself was born in Lethbridge, Alberta, and came to Victoria in 1918 when, he says, "there were only 22,000 people here."

Big fists and hard work have kept him out of trouble and in business all his life.

Dave relied on his fists to score quick knockouts while reigning as lightweight boxing champion of B.C. and Alberta and his large, strong hands have helped him in the moving business.

A past Commodore of the Capital City Yacht Club, a member of Metchosin Golf Club and of both the Eagles and Pro-Pats, Dave Lewis was a boxing instructor for the First Battalion Canadian Scots for 16 years. He still watches all the fights and rates "Cassius Clay as the greatest heavyweight ever."

Dave is proud of the fact he has never been sick.

"I'm 66 and I've still got everything I was born with," he says.

But, he says, he quit school when he was 13 "and I've worked like a slave ever since."

He started in Victoria with Morrows Cartage, then went to Pacific Transfer and finally Dowells before setting off on his own with Lewis Cartage and as a career as the "piano-moving expert."

He has built up a reputation that has given him piano-hauling contracts with practically every major firm in the city. He has moved instruments for the Victoria Symphony Orchestra for 45 years.

Among other things, of course, Lewis Cartage moves about 60 pianos a week and Dave says the piano is coming back into vogue.

"I move for every piano teacher in Victoria and they are all overloaded with students and can't take any more," he says. "Seems everyone is buying pianos."

After 48 years it's really the end of the piano road for David Lewis. He just hasn't stepped off it yet, that's all.

Officially, he has retired and son Ronald (one of his three children) now owns and runs Lewis Cartage. But with a piano, there's still no one like Dave.

"Oh, Ronald is 32 and a good mover," says his dad. But he admits with a big grin that he still keeps an eye on things.

"I just can't trust him . . . he doesn't do things like I used to."

9.8-Mill Hike Faces Oak Bay

Oak Bay council began snipping away Tuesday night at a record $7.4 million budget for 1975, an increase of 23 per cent over actual expenditures in 1974.

Without severe pruning, taxpayers are looking at a 9.81 mill increase for general purposes and debt over the 1974 figure of 46.68 mills.

After three hours of budget consideration, which produced a net reduction of $10,000, council scheduled further meetings for Monday and Tuesday.

Several council members said "it is obvious" Oak Bay will be paying as much for nine months work this year as was paid for 12 months last year, when there wasn't a lockout of employees.

Biggest single expenditure is $2.6 million for transfers of money to other jurisdictions for services, an increase of $456,965, but this is an area where Mayor Brian Smith said council has no control.

The biggest transfer sum is $2.4 million for schools compared with $2.1 million last year. School levies are set by the Greater Victoria school board.

Other major expenditures include:

Police and fire services $1,207,742 ($1,022,272 last year);

Debt charges $653,198 ($364,756), raising the debt mill rate to 9.2 from 4.63. Smith said the increase was for borrowing for land purchases and the recreation and cannot be changed;

Transportation services (including engineering, municipal yard, streets) $589,420 ($517,325).

Recreation and cultural services, including the Oak Bay Recreation Centre due to open this fall, came to $457,823 compared with $318,046 last year.

Smith said assessments of "just about everyone" are frozen at 1974 levels "so people will see a higher mill rate by that factor alone."

Start Next Week On Mall Project

A construction start on the Government Street Mall, delayed by the civic dispute, is likely by the middle of next week, city engineer John Sansom said today.

Work will start at the Wharf Street end and two or three blocks of the five-block-long mall should be completed by the end of June.

The project will then be halted to avoid congestion during the peak tourist season, and completed in the fall.

Sansom said Government will have to be closed to traffic over the affected sections while work is in progress.

The city will try to divert normal southbound traffic on Government along Bay to Blanshard, while light traffic will be able to use Wharf or Douglas.

Townhouse Hearing Thursday

An application for a land-use contract that would permit a 25-unit townhouse development on property at Esquimalt Road and Robert Street will be considered by Victoria City council at a public hearing Thursday.

Already standing on the property at 527 Esquimalt Road is Muirhead House, a heritage building which the developers claim they cannot integrate in their scheme.

The firm, Farmers and Merchants Trust Ltd., has offered the home to the city or its nominated agent at no charge, and city housing officials are discussing with Victoria West community representatives the feasibility of moving the building.

PATS' GOALIE TAKES AWARD

ED STANIOWSKI

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Goaltender Ed Staniowski of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League has been named top Canadian major junior hockey player of the year.

Staniowski was picked for the award in a poll of hockey writers and broadcasters across the country.

The 19-year-old goaltender was on the ice for 3,878 minutes in 65 games this year, picking up two shutouts and four assists while recording a 29-31-5 record.

The two other nominees for the award were goaltender Norman Lapointe of Trois-Rivieres Draveurs of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and centre Doug Jarvis of Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior series.

The selection, based on the player's proficiency, gentlemanly conduct and his participation activities other than hockey, was announced at the Memorial Cup dinner Tuesday night.

Seaboard Construction rallied in the fifth inning Tuesday to drop Ingraham Hotel 2-1 at Central Park and climb into a first-place deadlock with Port Angeles Telecable in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Seaboard catcher Wayne King, who hit three of seven singles off losing pitcher Mel Nelson, started the rally with a leadoff hit. Phil Berry, who hurled a three-hitter for the victory, then gained base on a fielder's choice which put King out at second and later scored on an outfield error after Vern Benn singled.

With the score then tied 1-1, Benn scored what proved to be the winning run on John Martin's single.

PRO LACROSSE ATTENDANCE UP

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Lacrosse League said Tuesday that attendance for the first 20 games of its 1975 season was up 39.6 per cent over the same number of games last year.

Commissioner Gerry Patterson said attendance averaged 7201 per game for a total of 144,038 throughout the six-team league comprising Boston Bolts, Long Island Tomahawks, Maryland Arrows, Montreal Quebecois, Philadelphia Wings and Quebec Caribous.

Per-game attendance was 2037 more than at the same stage of the league's first season of play last year.

"This increase is particularly encouraging in light of the fact that we are competing directly with basketball and hockey playoffs and with the commencement of the baseball season," Patterson said.

"We are well on our way to our goal of an attendance throughout the league of over one million fans."

TOKYO — Queen Elizabeth, the first reigning British monarch to visit Japan, received an enthusiastic welcome today from Emperor Hirohito and an estimated 40,000 cheering citizens who waved paper Japanese and British flags.

The 74-year-old emperor and Empress Nagako greeted the Queen and Prince Philip in the entrance hall of the guest house where they will stay during their six-day visit. The couple came from the Crown colony of Hong Kong on the Queen's special plane.

Labor Leaders Balk

Times News Service

TORONTO — Canadian Labor Congress leaders said today they will only agree to a federal government call for voluntary wage restraint if the government introduces a program to provide more equitable distribution of income and restraints on rents, dividends, profits, professional fees, land speculation and housing.

Leaders of the 1.9 million-member labor organization made a statement on wage restraint proposals, advanced by Finance Minister John Turner, after a morning meeting of the heads of 60 unions.

"The labor movement is willing to do its part in the fight against inflation, but it will never consent to discriminatory treatment against wage earners, pensioners and those who have no means to protect themselves," the congress position paper said.

Congress president Joe Morris said no program of wage restraint can be considered acceptable to labor unless it covers the following:

—Curbs on oil and gas prices "which have contributed to the fueling of inflation."

—A major effort to improve the supply of housing — "This has seriously deteriorated and eroded real incomes through higher housing costs."

—Regulation of rents to curb gouging of tenants.

—Action to stop land speculation.

—Higher old-age pensions.

—Guarantees that tax concessions to corporations will be invested to create jobs "and not end up in the payment of higher dividends."

—Full employment policies to get rid of current high levels of unemployment.

—Action to control fees in the professions.

—Tax credits to protect those with little or no bargaining power and who make up the bottom end of the incomes scale.

Prime target of labor's displeasure has been a confidential government document leaked to the press this week which proposes maximum wage increases of 12 per cent or $2,400 — whichever is lower — in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of the program.

The confidential document, which congress leaders did not get until Monday afternoon — after it was published in the press—sets out a plan to reduce the rate of inflation to 3.5 per cent a year by the last quarter of 1978.

The rate of inflation in the third quarter of 1975 is expected to be 10 per cent.

The document includes a table in which workers who gained less than the national average in wage increases in the last two years will get the maximum 12 per cent.

Those who won more than the national average gain would have their maximum per-cent raises reduced proportionately.

Professional fees would be goverened by the same principles applying to wages.

In general, price increases would be limited to the amount sufficient to cover cost increases and guides would only apply to interest rates set by banks and other financial institutions. There are no restraints proposed in the document for dividends.

Meanwhile, NDP parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent said Tuesday government anti-inflation programs are wage controls without price controls.

"It's clearly a set of documents aimed at working people only," Broadbent said of government working papers distributed to labor leaders.

ROYAL REVAMPS MORTGAGE RATES

TORONTO (CP) The Royal Bank of Canada restructured its system of mortgage rates Tuesday in an effort to channel more funds into new housing construction and less into existing housing.

The rate for mortgages on existing housing will rise to 11 per cent for both National Housing Act (NHA) mortgages and conventional mortgages. The maximum mortgage granted on existing housing will be cut to $25,000 from $60,000.

The rates on new housing will not change. NHA mortgages will remain at 10.5 per cent and conventional mortgages at 10.75 per cent.

"The move has been made necessary by the unprecedented demand for mortgage funds which, if unchecked, would have exhausted our year's allocation in short order," said Rowland Frazee, Royal's executive vice-president and general manager.

"The $25,000 ceiling on mortgages on existing housing is intended to ensure that funds which continue to flow into this sector will be spread over the largest number of housing units and, in fact, will flow to the lower-priced sector of the markets," he said.

A number of trust companies, including Canada Permanent Trust Co. of Toronto, have reported they are out of funds and are not accepting new mortgage applications.

City Body Shop Rate $20

Victoria area body shops will break rank and raise their hourly rate to $20 from the government-set rate of $15.50 effective May 15.

An ICBC spokesman in Vancouver said today Victoria is the only area in the province where body shop operators have planned unilateral action to raise rates.

Dennis Butner, president of the Victoria unit of the Automotive Retailers Association, said today the raise is planned to meet higher operating costs. He said the current Insurance Corporation of B.C. Autoplan payment is not realistic in terms of the body shop operators' main concern—higher operating costs, taxes and wages.

Wage settlement yet to be made are expected to be between $8 and $9 an hour, plus 2 per cent holiday pay, he said. Meanwhile, shop charge-out rates cannot be made retroactive.

ICBC is now doing studies on the body shop rates in effect and will probably start talks with representatives of the ARA within the next month, the ICBC spokesman said.

Victoria body shop operators have raised the rates here several times before out of concert with the rest of B.C.

The last time the rates were raised above the ICBC approved rate, the insurance corporation re-instituted the old bid system for body work. A motorist was required to get three bids on the work to be done and ICBC would pay the lowest estimate, even if it was above the going rate.

But Victoria operators thwarted the system by refusing to give bids and motorists were forced to pay the surcharge out of their own pockets.

Crime Unit For City

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald confirmed today a special crime-fighting unit will be setup in Victoria "at least within a month and probably much sooner."

He said the special body, operated by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit, was requested by local law enforcement agencies and community groups and will handle major crime investigations on Vancouver Island.

The confirmation follows a decision by the policy board of CLEU to set up an auxiliary branch here.

CLEU was organized as a joint provincial police force last year to counter organized crime and has operated out of Vancouver, involved mainly in drug cases.

Macdonald said the Victoria CLEU office would likely be located at 2596 Cadboro Bay Road and will involve a core staff which will draw on law enforcement agencies throughout the island.

He did not rule out the possibility other CLEU units will be established in other parts of the province.

Liberal Showdown ... One Will Resign

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The Liberal party is headed for a showdown over the unity movement at this month's policy convention and, whatever the outcome, at least one MLA will resign from the party.

Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) announced Tuesday he will resign from the party if delegates at the May 24-26 Liberal convention do not support the concept of moving towards "a coalescing of the free enterprise parties."

If he resigns, Williams said he will sit as an independent and decide later whether to leave politics or join the Social Credit party.

But Liberal leader David Anderson said if the party moves to support a unity or coalition movement he will resign as leader and also sit as an independent.

In Vancouver, the Vancouver-Burrard Liberal Constituency Association Tuesday night came out in full support of Anderson.

The association approved a resolution stating its opposition to a unity party in any form and urging that Liberal candidates run in every constituency in B.C. in the next provincial election.

Anderson said he has been identified with a party stand against involvement with unity and if the party changes

Reprieve for Murderer Buys Allmand Study Time

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — After obtaining a stay of execution for convicted murderer Rene Vaillancourt yesterday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said the reprieve would give cabinet time to study the whole question of capital punishment.

Vaillancourt was scheduled to hang May 15 for the shooting death of a Toronto police constable in a 1973 holdup and the question of commuting his sentence was "too complex" to be decided by Cabinet now, Allmand told newsmen. Two members of his jury recommended clemency.

Taken into consideration was the fact that there are now eight men awaiting death for killing policemen or jail guards on duty.

The solicitor-general also said that a stay of execution has been granted in the case of John Francis Connearney, sentenced to hang in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail April 25.

There was a "very important possibility" that legislation would be introduced before Vaillancourt's new execution date — October 31 — to end all capital punishment in Canada, the solicitor-general added.

He was personally committed to a total ban on hanging and between now and Oct. 31 "I intend to pursue my goal of abolishing the death penalty."

All death sentences have been commuted since 1962 when Canada's last hangings occurred in Toronto.

Allmand felt that the tide of public opinion was changing from a hard line favoring capital punishnent to a stance "more in favor of abolition," according to letters received by his office.

25 FLEE FIRE IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 80 firemen and 15 pieces of equipment brought under control a three-alarm fire that destroyed three buildings in Vancouver's Skid Road district early today.

Fire officials said it was believed the 25 residents, mostly elderly men, all were safely evacuated from the building at Main and Powell.

At one point, firemen thought they would have to evacuate a city block if a fourth building, a three-storey rooming house, caught fire, but the fire was controlled before this was necessary.

Recycling Depot Braced

The recycling depot on Borden at McKenzie will be back in business Saturday at 9 a.m. — and braced for the bottles and cans piling up in homes through three months of labor strife.

But, spokesman David Jackman said Tuesday, there are 100 tons of old newspapers in the depot now and no room for more until they have been moved out.

Jackman said he received about 15 to 20 calls early Tuesday, the first day the regional staff was back on the job since being locked out early in February.

"We really expect quite a lot of people on Saturday."

The recycling depot expects to resume its regular hours next week, that is, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

For now, what it can handle is glass bottles, cleaned and flattened tin cans, clean aluminum foil, corrugated boxes and brown kraft bags.

Later, it will be able to take the bundles of newspapers.

Jackman said the staff is digging its way through the heaps of material left in the parking lot outside the depot.

Later this week the staff will meet to decide in what order the mobile clinics it has operated elsewhere in the community will be brought back into action.

Police Willing to End Lock-Up Duties

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory today welcomed the idea that responsibility for lock-up facilities be taken from police and given to another body.

The proposal that the attorney-general's department assume responsibility for lock-up and remand facilities in the B.C. criminal courts system to end an "atrocious and inhumane" system was contained in a government report released Tuesday.

The report, prepared for the Justice Development Commission by Jack Cram, vice-chairman of the attorney-general department's courts division, recommends that lock-ups be supervised by sheriff's officers instead of police.

"It would relieve us of a tremendous workload," said Gregory.

"The whole thing could perhaps be handled at less expense by the sheriff's office."

Cram's report also recommends that remand centres should be operated by sheriffs rather than the corrections department.

The report says atrocious conditions are likely to remain if municipalities, through the police, retain responsibility.

"There is a fundamental injustice in the police retaining custody of a prisoner once he has been charged; the accused should not be in custody of his accuser."

Cram recommends that the accused be turned over to a neutral custodian as soon as possible following his arrest and that interviews and line-ups be conducted in a neutral location.

The current system pays lip service to the presumption of innocence and yet permits accused persons to be held by correctional officers before they are convicted and in need of correction.

"In addition to inhumane and inconsistent treatment of prisoners awaiting trial, there are many inefficiencies in the operation of lock-ups and remand centres."

Cram suggests establishment of small lock-up centres around the province to lessen need for transportation.

He recommends that all courts be integrated and criminal courts and counsel provide flexibility to accommodate trials of accused persons in custody.

County supreme court sittings should be continued during July and August and time limits for disposition of criminal cases should be investigated.

"The problem most frequently voiced by judges, lawyers police, corrections personnel and the public at large,
